War Summary of The Latest Events

British shipping losses for the week are again comparatively low. The vessels sunk by torpedoes or mines comprise fourteen over 1,600 tons, four under 1,600 tons, and eight fishing vessels. The figures for the previous week were fourteen, three and seven, respectively. This is submarine weather, and as the German Junkers are now depending upon the submarines to win the war, the fact that the pirates are not keeping up with the figures they set as essential to starve Britain is significant. The losses are still large enough, and the latest figures do not indicate that the reported innovations to check the submarine terror have been brought into play with any degree of pronounced success. It is more than likely that the steadily increasing mined area in the North Sea decided upon by Britain is having its effect in helping to stop the ravages of the subs. The patrol service is also growing in numbers and strength, while the number of armoured merchantmen is mounting rapidly. But Britain is not yet satisfied with the amount of new tonnage that is being turned out to replace that which has gone down. Sir Edward Carson and Admiral Jellicoe have joined in an urgent appeal to the shipyard workers to use every effort to replace the losses, and this at a time when it would almost appear as if British yards could not undertake the building of another ship. It will be surprising if the summer passes without major operations in which the British fleet plays a most important part.

Russian forces are very hotly engaged with the reinforced Teutons in Galicia. As was anticipated, the Germans have rushed strong bodies of troops to the aid of the Austrians in an attempt to stem the tide of the Russian advance. The Germans claim the repulse of Russian counter-attacks and the capture of heights in the Carpathian foothills, and some minor successes on the line of the Lomniza River. Petrograd, which even under the old regime was usually very frank in recording reverses, admits that to the south of Kalusz the foe did take some heights, but claim that these were retaken. It is not certain which of the two reports is the more recent. Berlin announces an increase in the fighting activity at Riga, which often has been mentioned in the despatches by the Teutons of late, but the Russians do not report important fighting there.

Disorders of a rather serious nature have occurred in Petrograd arising out of the disbanding of several regiments at the front which the Government held had dishonored themselves by refusing to obey orders. This, following upon the resignation of several members of the Government, has upset the plans for the completion of a new and strengthened Cabinet. The Government seems to be dealing with the disorders in a very energetic manner, and is not hesitating in the adoption of severe measures. Whether these disorders, which, it is reported, have led to street fighting in which machine guns were used, are directly affecting affairs on the fighting fronts is not known. Russia has done so well of late that the Allies will be inclined to take a less pessimistic view of the troubles than would have been the case a few weeks ago.

On the Verdun front the French have repulsed a number of attempts by the Germans to regain the positions captured on Tuesday. Paris reports that

The case a few weeks ago.

On the Verdun front the French have repulsed a number of attempts by the Germans to regain the positions captured on Tuesday. Paris reports that the attacks were of the most stubborn nature, and that great losses were inflicted upon the Germans, who did not gain an inch of the territory they desired. The fighting in this area bids fair to develop into a sustained action of some magnitude, while it has been represented that France is not now able to undertake a great offensive, but few will believe that such would be the case were Pétain to decide that the moment had arrived. In the actions fought recently on the Aisne and in the Verdun areas the French have shown an amazing ability after nearly three years of terrific warfare to strike hard blows, and there is no reason for believing that their Commanders have been tied down to a strictly defensive campaign simply because the last great attack carried out under Nivelle, did not attain the success that was hoped for.

General Haig reports that the British have made further slight gains around Monchy-le-Preux, and have been successful in a number of raids elsewhere. Aerial engagements continue on a more or less important scale.

CRISIS IS NOT

German War Party

Chancellor von Bethmann
Has Been Forced to
the Reactionaries, but tory is Sure to Be For New Peace Moves.

LONDON, July 17.—The turmoil which has been Germany ever since the startling success on the part of her offensive has culminated in the resignation of Imperial Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, but all serve to show that his far from being the last drama, is but the beginning of reaching developments which are bound to affect the fabric of the German Empire and have consequences on the progress of the European struggle.

The resignation of the Chancellor came in the end quite unexpected for Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the prolonged party discussions, heated debates of the matter of the Reichstag, which have been proceeding all the week, seemed to have over his opponents, who clamored for his head, but concessions which are to the formation of a kind of coalition Ministry.

At the same time, the declaration that Germany is fighting for the defense of her territorial possessions, a formula that seemed satisfied both those who clamored by agreement and those who demanded repudiation of the "No annexations and no ties."

In all this Dr. von Bethmann was strongly backed by the Emperor. The advent of Prince upon the scene, by his Imperial father to deliberations affecting the dynasty—seems to have entirely the position with the Imperial Chancellor. The Prince at once took a leading part in the discussions with the Emperor, and his ancient hostility towards Dr. von Bethmann coupled with his notorious for political reform, was precipitated the Chancellor's resignation.

The fact that Field Marshal Hindenburg, chief of staff, von Ludendorff, first quarter-general, have been most influential throughout these discussions that a section of the press clamored for a joint dictatorial government, which the Emperor decreed, or for the movement towards a diminution of the war aims, and therefore peace, upon which the Emperor has been doing his best to persuade the German Emperor.

The Bavarian Ministers, among the most active in the anti-conscription party, and the Centre Catholic party, have turned to the peace gospel preached by Matthias Erzberger directly from Vienna, where the Emperor Charles shows that

WAS DRESSED AS SOLDIER.

American Woman Tried to Accom pany Husband to War.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, July 17.—
A young woman attired in khaki and with her black hair cut short return ed to the United States Sunday as a military prisoner after an unsuccess ful attempt to pass as an American soldier. The woman is said to be the bride of a corporal who, having been married just before the first Ameri can army left for France, smuggled his wife aboard the vessel.

The woman left America with a regiment from Douglas, Ariz. The name of the pseudo-soldier was with held. The corporal is said to have got his bride past the embarkation
officers as a member of his squad.
With her dark hair clipped short and somewhat masculine features it was difficult to detect her identity.

It was learned that the woman stowed away for three days after the transport sailed, and was discovered
by the army surgeon when the cor
poral's squad, with others belonging to the same company, were paraded
on the after-deck to have their throats examined. Early the same morning there had been rumors cur rent among the soldiers and mem bers of the crew of the transport that a woman had stowed away on board disguised as a soldier. The surgeons were notified of this, and requested by the commanding officers of the two regiments on the ship to keep a strict lookout.

As soon as the woman was de tected she was placed under guard
in one of the after-deck cabins, and no one was allowed to communicate with her. The woman will not be re leased until the Federal authorities have decided what is to be done with her. It could not be ascertained
Monday whether the fictitious soldier would be sent back to Douglas, or whether she would be punished for impersonating a soldier and stowing
away on the transport.

Army officers said that they could not understand how the disguised
woman traveled with the regiment
from Arizona and was billeted for several days in the barracks at the port whence the transport sailed. It was evident, they said, that all mem bers of the corporal's squad must have been in the secret and assisted in screening her from detection.

NEW YORK, July 17.—For the first time in more than a century
armed troops of the British Empire,
under their own regimental colors,
paraded Monday in New York city.
The parade, which was for the pur

British subjects for the British army,
consisted of a detail of eleven officers
and one hundred and fifty men of the 48th Regiment of Canadian

The Kilties, in command of Lieut.

day morning from Toronto. They were met by a detachment of the 71st Regiment, now in the Federal

Great Russian Drive Proves to be Irresistible.

Important Results Are Expected to Flow Immediately From Vic tories in Galicia, Which May Even Bring About the Collapse of Austria in the Near Future.

LONDON, July 17.—Gen. Kornil
off's magnificent drive through Ga licia is arousing the wonder and ad miration of all military observers here. In less than a week he has made a westward advance of forty miles south of the Dniester, while north of the river he has held all of last week's gains and is rapidly push ing on toward Lemberg by four routes. Every railroad in the south eastern quarter of a circle about the Galician capital is in his hands.

Three results have been obtained
by the Russian armies in this region.
First, a wedge has been driven be tween the Prussians, under General
von Bothmer, and the Austrian forces under General von Kirbach.
Their only communication now is by a circuitous route through Krasne
and then to the north-east of the Ga lician capital. Of course the Prus sians can pour reinforcements into Lemberg directly from Germany, but the trench front is broken for more than seventy miles, and Russian cavalry is pouring through this wide gap, closely following the rapidly re treating Austrians.

The second result gained by Gen.
Korniloff is the separation of the Austrian forces north of the Dniester
from those south of it by the speedy advance of Russian troops along both banks of the river. At the same time the Russians are moving on Lemberg
in the direction of Iocow on the north from Brzezany on the centre,
from Halicz toward Rohatyn and Chodoroff on the south-east and from Stanislaw south of the Dniester along the Dolina-Stryj railroad. In this latter direction, it is announced,
they have crossed the Sivka River,
captured Krechovice and are nearing Dolina, where the railroad turns
north to Stryj.

Third and even more important is the moral advantage gained. It has shattered the Prussian hope of a separate peace and in turn is shaking the political constitution of the Kaiser's autocratic Government,
while at the same time it is encour aging the Allies, who look upon the Russian offensive as another assur ance of final victory.

On the south the activity extends almost to the Carpathians, 50 miles south-west of Halicz. Capture of the latter town marked a distinct phase of the operations against the Ga
lician capital quite as threatening as the attacks from Brzezany and along the Tarnopol-Zloczow line farther north.

General Korniloff, instead of at tacking from the north of the river, pushed on from the vicinity of Mariampol, capturing Jezupol, on the Lukva River, twelve miles below Halicz, and then by a rapid turning movement to the north attacked the town in the rear, where it was most exposed. The Austrians hastily evacuated it and retreated westward
toward the Lomnica River, an escape
to the south having been rendered
impossible by the Russian advance

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

Winnipeg, July 16.—Not since the mid dle of last week has there been a trans action in October wheat, the only posted future on the Winnipeg exchange. There have been bids of $2 per bushel, without any offerings coming out. The attitude of holders and growers illustrates a lack of care in gossip of a fixed price, or a maximum price around $1.75 for the new crop. With cash prices now 40c over the October bids, there is no disposition to sell the future.

Trade in cats was fairly active today.
Trade news was inclined bearishly, with favorable crop reports, and wire reports that export inquiry was falling below ex pectations.

Flax was the strong feature, an un settled crusher and speculative inquiry sending bids up 5c on July and 7½c on October during the forenoon. Both de liveries weakened at the close.

The demand for cash wheat was fairly good today, with all grades meeting an inquiry. Government agents, millers, ex porters and shippers supplied the de mand. Cash oats were in good demand.

American Naval Losses.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—The grounding of the Olympica, flagship of the coast patrol fleet of the Second Naval District, and better known as the flagship of Admiral Dewey during the Spanish-American War, on the rocks off Block Island, adds another vessel to the already long list of naval vessels that have been lost or badly damaged during the past fourteen months. The cruiser Milwaukee was wrecked off
the California coast in January
while attempting to salvage the submarine H-3, which went ashore in December. In August of last year the armored cruiser Memphis was wrecked in the harbor of Santo Domingo city during a tropical storm.
A month before that the fuelship Hector was wrecked off the harbor of Charleston, S. C. In May, 1916, the mine-planter San Francisco was badly damaged when the vessel struck a shoal near Chatham Light. The destroyer Terry struck a reef off Puerta Plata, Santo Domingo, last summer and was beached. Last fall the fuel-ship Jupiter was in a collision with an Italian bark.

Boer Irreconcilables Warned.

CAPE TOWN, July 17.—A mass meeting held Sunday in Port Elizabeth, Cape of Good Hope Province, passed a resolution condemning the revolutionary and republican agitation of a small section of Boer irreconcilables, and declaring unconprising opposition to this or any other attempt to sever South Africa
from the British Crown and Empire.
The meeting solemnly warned the agitators that persistence in such attempts would inevitably plunge
South Africa into bloodshed and ruin.

The Chinese capital was surrounded by Republican troops.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness,
and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube.
When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be

evacuated it and retreated westward
toward the Lomnica River, an escape
to the south having been rendered
impossible by the Russian advance
along the whole line between the Dniester and the Carpathians.

Owing to the rapidity of General Korniloff's advance the Austrian armies, both north and south of the Dniester, are in a critical position.
From the Tarnopol-Lemberg railway
they are being driven southward,
and from the Stanislaw-Strzy railway northward into gradually narrowing
space centering at Lemberg itself.
Should either the northern or the southern armies reach Lemberg before the Austrians, the latter would be forced to surrender as the only alternative to annihilation.

Such a disaster could portend the complete collapse of Austria as a fighting force, and the power that began the world war, first prompted by Prussian intrigue, and then falling completely under the domination of Prussia, would be obliged to beg
for peace on any terms.

Duke Visits Canadians.

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, July 17.—His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, has been paying a visit to the Canadian corps. During his stay he climbed Vimy Ridge and looked over the plain of Douaids toward Lens. The ex-Governor-General of Canada also inspected some of the Dominion's troops, including a detachment of the Princess Patricia's regiment,
which carried the colors the Princess herself embroidered and presented to the unit before it left Ottawa late in 1914. It is stated that the Patricia's is the only regiment which carries its colors into action.

Before leaving, his Royal Highness saw the massed pipe bands of the corps on parade and heard the pipers play the "Retreat," which is something the enemy will never hear.

"The British transport Armadale, board, was torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine in the Atlantic on June 27. Six soldiers, one passenger, and four of the crew are missing and it is presumed were drowned." The Armadale was a merchant steamer of 6,153 tons gross, built in 1909 at Glasgow and owned by the Australia Steamship Co., of London. There is nothing in the despatch to indicate that there were Canadians on board.

German Thrust Fails.

LONDON, July 17.—The Germans
in Champagne have again attempted with large bodies of men to recapture positions taken from them recently near Mont Haut and Teton.
They were entirely repulsed near the Teton, suffering heavy casualties. On Mont Haut during a night-long battle
their efforts, according to the French War Office, were momentarily successful in regaining nearly all the ground they had lost. Violent counter-attacks launched by the French,
however, succeeded in the return to General Petain's forces of all the German gains.

Bohemia Has No Hope.

AMSTERDAM, July 17.—It is reported from Vienna that the German and Bohemian members of the Upper and Lower Houses of the Austrian Parliament have adopted jointly a resolution setting forth their desire for peace within the country and the possibility of living side by side with the Czechs without abridgement of the "national self-determination" of both elements. The resolution says,
however, that a separate Bohemian
constitution would not be recognized.

The Finance Minister announced that subscribers to previous war
loans could on new issues convert their prior holdings at par.

Drunkenness Decreases.

One year ago June the first the temperance legislation came into effect and a Winnipeg paper states that of 81 Winnipeg hotels existing at that time, 23 have closed their doors. A report compiled by the city police department shows a great decrease in drunkenness under prohibition. "Dunks" for eleven months, from July, 1915, to May,
1916, numbered 3,223 and from June, 1916, to May, 1917, the last months for which reports have been compiled, only 724. An increase of 108 in general crimes is reported in the same period.

The Union Jack History of Flag

ALTHOUGH every Canadian ought to know already the history and meaning of the Union Jack, it is nevertheless a good thing to take the present time to remind ourselves of the significance of our beloved Imperial emblem. As befits the most venerable flag among the nations of the world, a flag which has left its imprint on the flags of the British overseas dominions, the Union Jack has a long and complicated history. Other nations have "scrapped" their former emblems, and set up new ones during the changes of their history. The Union Jack, on the contrary, can trace its descent to those dim times when knights rode in the lists when the Cross of St. George stood red against a white field, and flew victorious among the arrows of Agincourt; when the flag of Britain met the "Bright St. Andrew's Cross" of Scotland in mortal combat.

To Canadians who know nothing about the venerable precedents and stern dictates of the ancient school of heraldry the Union Jack teaches a particular lesson, namely, that flags are not the creations of color-loving committees and "anciful artists, but that they all have definite origins, and every detail has a meaning, if you can understand their language.

So here is the story of the Union Jack, containing in its carefully modulated stripings the whole history of a united Britain. It is a story of heraldic terms and details, but if you read it, you will know the flag to hang from your house, and what is more you will not reverse it, nor yet hang it upside down as a signal of distress.

The first "Union Jack" was adopted in 1606 soon after the union of England and Scotland under James I., and the "Jack" is supposed to be a corruption of Jac, which was the common abbreviation for Jacobus or James. The Union Jack combined the ancient flag of England, the red cross of St. George on a white field, with the ancient flag of Scotland, the white cross of St. Andrew on a blue field. The two flags were combined by putting the cross of St. George with a white edge, or fimbriation as the heralds call it, representing the white field of the old English flag over the old Scotch flag. The rules of heraldry applicable to flags as well as to coats of arms did not permit color on color or metal on metal. The white represented silver and in a formal description of the flag is termed "argent." Consequently the fimbriation not only preserved a portion of the ancient white field for the red cross to repose in, but avoided the heraldic solecism of placing a red cross on a blue field.

The union of Great Britain and Ireland (1801) introduced a third cross into the Union Jack—the red cross of St. Patrick which was a saltire, like the cross of St. Andrew. These two crosses were combined, an arrangement which the heralds described as "quarterly per saltire, counterchanged." In each arm we see the two crosses lying side by side and properly of equal widths.

CANADA'S INLAND SEA

"ATLANTIC SEAPORTS" WILL BE OPENED ON HUDSON BAY.

Great Undertaking That Will Help to Solve the Problem of Transporting the Grain Output of the North-West to the Markets of Europe, Thus Helping Development of the Dominion.

TORONTO or Ottawa thinks of the Atlantic as far distant. Yet north of these cities Canada has Atlantic seaports—towns on the great inland extension of the Atlantic known as Hudson Bay. This great body of water, of course, has always been just where it is to-day. Its use for transportation by boat has been greatly hindered by the ice-blockade that closes Hudson Strait for all the months of the year but three. Modern traffic conditions, the growing grain-output of the great Canadian North-West, and, above all, the necessities imposed by the present war, have at last made it profitable to use this water-route for the limited period during which it is available, and the Canadian Government will complete, this spring, a railroad line connecting her three transcontinental roads with tide-water on this inland sea, thus eliminating the railroad haul across half the continent. Writes Mr. Earle William Gage in The Scientific American:

"That the completion of the Hudson Bay Railroad is a vital matter of interest to commerce needs no argument. It is not the idle dream of a passenger-agent desiring a new field of tourist endeavor, but the result of insistent demands made by a country whose development has outstripped the efforts of three great railway systems to keep pace. As early as 1906, western Canada was the congested centre of railway transportation, both outgoing and incoming lines being blocked with grain, live stock, and supplies. The Hudson Bay Railroad is simply the result of a continuous blockade of traffic, the aim being to relieve this by giving the shortest possible route to tide-water from fields of production.

"Had not an enlarged outlet been supplied to the ocean, the development of Canada would have been retarded. Canada's great inland sea, Hudson Bay, gives the West tide-water in the meridian of the Mississippi Valley. A glance at the map shows it to be the shortest route from the centre of the country's fields of production to the world's markets. Port Nelson, the northern terminus of the new railroad, is as near the central point of the grain area as the centre of that area is to the head of the Great Lakes, and it is about the same distance from Liverpool as Montreal.

"This region is often associated with Arctic conditions; yet no part of Hudson Bay comes within the Arctic Circle, and Engineer Armstrong in his recommendations stated with considerable assurance 'That ships may enter and leave Port Nelson all the year round is a fact worth remembering.'

"Though the Bay remains open, Hudson Strait freezes over. Hence full time for the moving of the food-products to Europe, at a very material saving in time and freight cost, the expenditure of $16,000,000 for the construction of the 425 miles of railroad will pay big dividends to the Government. During the closed season the natural resources of the Bay region, including farm-crops, timber, paper-pulp, minerals, and the enormous wealth of fur and fin, will compensate for the operation of the system."

The exponents of the railroad point out that the heavy grain traffic from the Western plains to the Atlantic seaboard is carried over the Great Lakes only during a little longer season than the Hudson Bay route promises, and larger cargoes may be carried in a shorter time, which discounts the argument against the route to Europe. To quote further:

"That the Hudson Bay route promises a path from western Canada to Liverpool, shorter by 1,000 miles than the present prevailing rail route, is a powerful factor in its favor. . . . That a very material saving will be effected in freight cost alone is appreciated when we remember that the freight upon grain from the wheat-belt to Hudson Bay approximates ten cents per bushel, or the same as to the head of the Great Lakes, at present. It now costs fifteen cents per bushel to transport the grain to the Atlantic seaboard ports, which represents a fair profit to the wheat-growers. Assuming an export trade of 20,000,000 bushels, which could be readily handled if the harbor were open but two months of the year, this saving would amount in a single season to approximately $3,000,000.

"The demand for western Canada's prime beef, mutton, pork, and poultry is increasing in Europe. It now costs about sixty cents per hundred to transport steers to the Atlantic ports, and an additional sixty cents to ship them to Liverpool. For the payment of sixty cents per hundred these cattle and stock may be delivered in Liverpool, on an average, from the fields of production, or an average saving of $6 per head for steers. This saving will approximate $1,000,000 per season of only two months, or a total of $4,000,000. Therefore, if the Hudson Bay Railroad is operated but two out of the twelve months, in four years it would pay off its construction debt. But the officials have calculated that the remaining nine or ten months may be devoted to increasing the operations of a local nature."

Must Raise Revenue.

British Columbia is facing the problem of revenue-raising somewhat determinedly. The special features of the new plan now proposed are a poll tax upon those not already paying a minimum of five dollars in provincial taxes; increased levies on wild lands; an increase in succession duties and in the taxes on war profits; and a tax on theatre tickets. The poll tax is a reimposition, and in its new form will not affect any otherwise bearing their share of the public burden. Men who are best able to bear the larger burdens will be called upon for a super-tax on incomes.

Record Mineral Production.

British Columbia last year established a new record in its mineral production, which approximated the $45,000,000 mark in its monetary scribed as "quarterly per saltire, counterchanged." In each arm we see the two crosses lying side by side and properly of equal widths. In the opposite arm the white becomes red and the red becomes white. This is what is meant by counterchanging. When the two crosses were thus placed side by side the red cross of St. Patrick fell on the blue field and it became necessary to resort to another fimbriation to avoid color on color. Hence the narrow white strip separating the red part of each arm from the blue field. Then over all again was placed the cross of St. George with its white fimbriation. This produced the Union Jack of to-day. It is officially described as follows:

"Azure: the Saltires of St. Andrew and St. Patrick, quarterly per saltire, counterchanged, argent and gules; the latter fimbriated of the second; surmounted by the Cross of St. George of the third, fimbriated as the last."

"The Union Jack has a top and a bottom. The cross of St. Andrew came in before the cross of St. Patrick and takes precedence. Consequently the broader white stripe, representing the cross of St. Andrew, should be uppermost next the staff."

The red flag with the Union Jack in the corner which we see flying at the sterns of steamships is what is popularly supposed to be the British flag. It is a British flag and is known as the "Red Ensign." It is the flag appropriated to the use of the mercantile marine. The British flag, the flag used by the army, flown on public buildings, is the Union Jack—no more and no less. Still another flag is used by the British navy. It is a white flag with the red cross of St. George and the Union Jack occupies the upper canton next the staff.

Thus in Flanders to-day the British soldier, if he is from Old England, sees floating above him the cross of St. George, as the Scotchman sees the cross of St. Andrew, as the Irishman sees the cross of that venerable saint who banished the snake from his native heath.

As has been hinted, the influence of the Union Jack has spread far beyond the British Isles. It is safe to say that it has left its trace on every Anglo-Saxon emblem. The American flag, after all, is nothing but the Red Ensign, the red striped with white, the crosses of the Union Jack removed from the canton, and stars substituted on the blue field to represent the union of the States. Australia, Canada, and New Zealand, all of them bear the Union Jack or part of it cantoned on their emblems.

Canada's Crop Outlook.

While unfavorable conditions, in all parts of the country, have retarded the early planting operations, and while indications, in the great producing Provinces that smaller acreage than is planted, the outlook for the season as a whole is that the volume of food crops for the season will be somewhat less than the average. The greater production has been throughout all the Provinces. Reports received at the headquarters in Ottawa indicate that the response will justify the expectation that Canada, when the season rolls around, will offer for export a volume of food crops, though possibly not equaling, that of last year.

A condition could have arisen in which Canada would have been unable to produce far enough of the staple to meet the needs of her own population. But the domestic requirements seem commonplace in view of the duty of supplying liberal quantities to the armies at the front. Canada's imperative need, for more favorable seasons, would have prepared the wheat is the great staple chief exporting Province. Theoretically at least, it is expected to yield if sown before the middle of May. The acres of rich land in the belt could not, it is said, be planted until after that time. Nothing to prevent so much land with oats and so on and this course was followed are a good substitute for wheat should be raised where it is not permitted to produce crops. The great aim is to add to the bulk of the wheat supply. It is not necessary that grain should be wheat.

Impressed the H.

Writing thirty feet up with the guns of Vimy Ridge, a young soldier, heart full of pride at his victory, says:

"I know there must be in honor of what the Canadians have done here."

"Oh, what a sight when the guns opened up, in a second was broken with the dirges. The German prisoners that we take are Canadians, and well they say."

"Our boys are still advancing. We are staying back for rest. We worked twenty-four hours the first day, and it was food we had time to eat, matter as long as we were the poor boys out?"

"There is so much talk about our prisoners in Germany the way in which they are taken. Now, I am in a position to tell you the prisoners we take are not the poor boys you are talking about. They are good for evil, such as smoking their cigarettes and passing along."

"Why, I have talked with them, and they were tickled to be taken prisoners by us. Say, they couldn't for us, I had four of the while the rush was on."

BRITISH WANT CHEESE.

Story of Negotiations With Domin- ion Government.

Hon. Martin Burrell announced in the Commons recently that the Cheese Commission had been authorized by the British Board of Trade
 to pay 21½c f.o.b. steamer, Montreal, for No. 1 finest grade cheese,
 and that buying on this basis would begin as soon as arrangements could be made. The price to factories would, of course, be less the inland freight and usual handling charges.
 Existing methods of buying and selling at country points would be continued. The Cheese Commission would meet the trade at Montreal as soon as possible in order to complete arrangements to give effect to the Board of Trade proposals. The Minister of Agriculture explained that last Autumn the British Government had attempted to secure all the Canadian cheese, but acted too late in the season. The Canadian Government recommended that for the present season plans should be perfected in January or February, but nothing was done. In the meantime the British Government had com-mandered the New Zealand cheese
 at 19c per pound, and recommended
 commandeering the Canadian cheese.
 To this the Canadian Government objected, but suggested a commission with one British representative, to arrange the matter.

The British Commissioner arrived
 about the middle of April, but found that owing to the maximum price of cheese in England and the shipping problem it was impossible to secure Canadian cheese or even transport it to England. Such a condition threatened to seriously affect the cheese industry. The British Government then announced that they would commandeer all cheese arriving in England from Australia, New Zealand, the United States or Canada. The Canadian Government had taken the ground that while it was its duty to assist the Mother Country
 in its food supply it also had a duty to the producer and consumer in Canada. The Government had contended that if the price were fixed too low it would result in the div-sion of the raw material to other products and a curtailment of the supply of cheese. The result of the negotiations was the present offer of purchase from the British Board of Trade.

THE Ford car has been on the market twelve years, surely long enough to have proven its high quality. There is nothing experimental about it. Every part has stood the test of time and proven its stability with hard service. No other car has ever approached the durability records of the Ford.

No matter what price you pay for a car you cannot get one with a stancher

 Ford car are superior to those in any other car. Ford Vanadium steel has never been equaled in strength.

unfavorable climatic conditions in all parts of Canada, pre-vent early completion of sow-ings, and while there are hopes, in the great wheat-pro-vinces that a somewhat ex-cess than usual will be the outlook for the Domin-ion whole is that the total food crops for the coming year will be somewhat greater than average. The appeal for in-creased production has been general in all the Provinces, and received at the Government's in-terest in Ottawa indicate that the Government will justify the assur-ance given to Canada, when the harvest is around, will be able to export a volume of grain-ing, though possibly hardly that of last year.

Production could hardly be im-agineable if Canada would not be able to produce far more than the staple foodstuffs to the needs of her own people. Domestic requirements now take up a large place in comparison with the duty of supplying food in quantities to the allied forces at the front. Canada realizes the relative need, and, under favorable seasonal conditions, is prepared to meet it. The great staple crop in the exporting Provinces, and, locally at least, it cannot be so yield if sown much later in the middle of May. Thousands of rich land in the wheat belt, not, it is said, be sown at that time. But there is no prevent sowing these oats and forage crops, if the course was followed. Oats are a substitute for wheat, and are raised where conditions do not permit the production of corn. The great aim should be to increase the bulk of the world's grain. It is not necessary that the crop should be wheat.

PTE. ROY HOWIE WRITES

Monday, June 11th, 1917.

Dear Editor:—

It is my pleasure to write you a few lines for your paper, if you have a space for it, and would be so kind as to publish it. It is not very often that we get the opportunity to write, but as we are on a short rest, we have lots of time for this sort of thing.

Well I suppose that every one throughout the whole Dominion has heard of the gallantry of "Her Troops," during the past months. We have all done our best, which we showed on the morning of April 9th, at about half past five. It was a day I shall never forget in a hurry. I cannot express my feelings, while standing in the trench, awaiting the time to spring forward at the word of command from our officer, and the closer it came, the worse I felt; I would of liked to have gotten in a deep dug-out, but at that moment, while this floated through my mind, our officer said, "Let us go boys." With a spring over we went, the Artillery was strong and we went like mad men, for we all knew that it was for King and Country, and we did our bit like men should do, that was what we came over here for. We got over alright, and we did not know what minute we might get hit, as the bullets more than sing through the air, coming close and hitting the wire. As we entered his trench, the first German I saw was running over the land toward home so fast that it was hard to get him, that made us laugh and the officer said, "What are you laughing at boys?" one fellow spoke up and said, "At Fritz beating it." "Never mind him," said our officer, "Let us get these fellows out of this dug-out first." We were not long in getting them out, for it was Souvenirs that we were all after, and the Germans are awful cowardly, they won't put up a scrap at all, so our bayonet fighting is no good when they won't face it.

Everything passed fine with me, until the night of the 11th of April, then I got in the way of a shell or it got in any way, it is hard to say, a piece hitting me in the back, knocking me so that I turned about four hand-springs and laying me in the trench, the stretcher-bearer dressed my back and sent me out, it wasn't very bad, so I couldn't make "Blighty" on it. That made me still sore for a while, but I soon got over it, when I saw it was impossible to make it, as I was not wounded very bad.

Well I guess I had better cut my letter short or it will take too much space in your paper, and thanking you very much for your kindness for publishing it.

PTE. ED. PRICE WRITES

The following letter was received by Mrs. W. J. Magee from her nephew, who went overseas with the 148th Battalion and is now with the 20th Canadian Battalion on active duty in France.

Thursday, June 13th, 1917.

Dear Friends at Seven Oaks:—

I am going to make a try at thanking you for the convoy that arrived at my bunk on Sunday last. I surely should have written before, but as you may guess, circumstances don't always permit a fellow doing as he chooses in these parts. I should not grumble for I have been having an easy time lately, but somehow it is Thursday evening that I am writing this letter and I should have written Sunday, anyway I got at it before I had the good things all devoured. Everything was in fine shape, the box was not even jammed in a single place, the apples were delicious also the cake and the chicken wafers too were good and the chicken ahead of "Bully Beef." You have the wrong idea of the latter, it is only a name for canned beef that we have. It is hashed up pretty well generally and would not make a bad dope if warmed up and fixed up, well probably you would know what it needs, it's better than a piece of chalk when a fellow is good and hungry.

I had a small parcel from home a few days before and last night I thought I would clean it up, and found a little jug of honey and two eggs, the eggs were past eating. I can't see how I missed them, I thought I had everything except cake crumbs.

I suppose you are past garden seeding now. We are having grand weather here in France, in fact it has been nice mostly since the middle of April. The French people are busy with their crops now. I saw four women in the field apparently hoeing this forenoon. There was a fellow trying to harrow the other day. He had a very awkward outfit to my way of thinking, one horse and all he had to guide it was a single string which ran over it's back and connected to a side check or strap, which run from one bit-ting over it's neck to the other.

Many thanks for the papers. It is not very often we see a Napanee paper here, although there are often Toronto papers around the Y.M.C.A., also papers from other Canadian cities. There have been several rolls of Toronto Worlds given out to the men in our Battalion lately. They are quite a paper compared to the papers we get here. The French kids bring us English papers, we also get an edition of the Daily Mail, an English paper printed in France.

I was writing in the Y.M.C.A. where I had a table but it came closing time so now I have to use my knee guess you can note the change.

Well I can't think of any more news so will close and have it ready for posting to-morrow.

Hope every one is well but don't be too patriotic and work too hard, there are lots of people making a fortune out of this war.

Yours lovingly,

EDWARD PRICE.

KEEP THE POTATOES GREEN AND GROWING.

Many are growing potatoes in Canada this year, for the first time and, as a result of the greatly increased number of growers the crop will probably be greatly increased. But to insure a good crop there must be an abundance of moisture in the soil and the tops must be protected from insects and disease.

Town Council

Council Chambers,
July 16th, 1917.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor S. C. Denison in the chair.

Present—Reeve Graham and Councillors Steacy, Lowry, Hunter, Gibbard and Robinson.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from the Hydro-Electric Power Commission, thanking the Council, for courtesies extended to them in their transactions with the Council, and stating that they would indemnify the Corporation for any law costs occasioned by the dismantling of the old power plant. Ordered filed.

Dr. Cowan appeared before the Council and addressed them in the hope of having the road on Thomas street, between Centre Street and the Court House, repaired and made a fairly good road. He also expressed his disapproval of the building of a new cement walk on the east side of John Street from the postoffice north to Thomas Street, and outside of the trees.

Coun. Spencer entered and took his seat at the Board.

The question of the Disposal Works came in for some little discussion. The Clerk was instructed to write Mr. Wright, the Engineer, asking him to visit Napanee at his earliest convenience, as the condition at the Works must be attended to at once.

A resolution was passed, which means that hereafter no financial aid shall be given to Margaret Jaynes, and the Chairman of the Poor and Sanitary Committee was instructed to inform Mrs. Jaynes that the Council was prepared to make the necessary arrangements for her removal to the House of Industry, Kingston.

A By-law was passed, appointing Mr. John G. Fennell, Collector of Taxes for the year 1917, at a salary of $250.00.

W. G. Wilson, W. H. Hunter, Mrs. A. E. Johnston, Mrs. Jane Parrott, (per C. I. Maybee), L. H. Henderson, Allen Wagar, N. W. Wagar, residents on the east side of John Street, between Dundas and Thomas petitioned the Council for the construction of a five-foot cement walk, said walk to be placed outside the trees. The said petitioners agreed to pay 50 per cent. of the costs of said improvement. On motion the prayer of the petition was granted.

A By-law providing for the collecting of the taxes for the year 1917 was introduced, given its several readings and finally passed. The by-law provides that all taxes are due and payable on August 1st, 1917. On the 1st day of October a penalty tax of 3 per cent. will be added to all remaining unpaid taxes; on November 1st, an additional tax of 1 per cent. will be added, and on December 1st, another additional tax of 1 per cent. shall be added, making in all a penalty tax of five per cent.

Reeve Graham informed the Council that Mr. Harry Nugent wished to rent the cement mixer, owned by the town.

Moved by Reeve Graham, seconded by Coun. Gibbard, that the Streets Committee be empowered to make arrangements for the rental of the

Well mother, the 9th was my birthday, and a bunch of us boys sang songs until 12 o'clock at night, and it had been a very hot day too, I was (sweet 22). Twenty-two years have passed away very fast, and it all seems like a dream. Little did I think ten years ago, that I would be engaged in this terrible war, and against the nations we are at present, but we are going to win just the same if it takes three years more.

Guess I will close as I am out of news for this time, sending my love to all and hope you will answer soon.

... probably be greatly increased. But to insure a good crop there must be an abundance of moisture in the soil and the tops must be protected from insects and disease.

CULTIVATION.

The soil should be kept cultivated with the cultivator or hoe until the tops meet sufficiently to shade the ground. As most of the tubers develop in the three or four inches of soil nearest the surface, and as the tubers will not develop well in dry soil, quite shallow cultivation is desirable at this season of the year. In soil which is dry there may be good development of tops but there will be few tubers. The roots in such cases have gone down deep into the soil to obtain moisture but the tuber-bearing stems, which are quite different from the root system, do not develop well. Where the soil is a loose, sandy loam, hilling is not necessary and may be injurious, as the soil dries out more than if left on the level. In heavy soils it is desirable to hill the potatoes as it will loosen the soil and the tubers will be shapelier than when the ground is left level. When there is sufficient rainfall and moisture in the soil hilling is likely to give best results in all kinds of soil as the soil will be looser and the tubers can push through it readily. As a great development of tubers takes place during the cooler and usually moister weather of the latter part of summer, it is very important to keep the plants growing well until then. In one experiment it was shown that during the month of September there was an increase of 119 bushels of potatoes per acre.

Referred to the Finance Committee.

A New Plan Devised.

Reorganization of the methods of tabulating Canadian agricultural census is being effected at the present time. Heretofore the Dominion Government made an annual census, while each of the provinces has its own system of compilation. The methods of gathering the figures differed widely, and the results were often at variance. The outcome has been confusing and has made Canadian statistics of doubtful veracity. This has frequently resulted in harmful confusion on the part of foreign countries trading with Canada, with consequences hardly beneficial to Canadian producers. Mr. R. H. Coats, the Dominion statistician, has been working for some time on a plan by which the Dominion and the Provinces will co-operate and co-ordinate in the collection of agricultural statistics. The Dominion will collect certain figures and the province other figures, and these will be exchanged. A conference recently held in Ottawa with the statisticians of the Quebec and Ontario Governments reached an agreement subject to the approval of their Governments. Mr. Coats will leave shortly for the West to consult with the Western provincial authorities in order to ensure their agreement with the plan.

Storing Powdered Coal.

In some places where experiments have been made in using powdered coal for fuel troubles have been encountered from the powder caking or packing in storage; but it has been found that, if it is permitted to cool off after the drying and pulverising process and before it is put in storage, large quantities can be kept in a satisfactory condition.

Artificial Gems.

Nearly all artificial gems—that is to say, stones that are really made by artificial means—are compounds of alum crystallized under special conditions. The metallic salts that are added during fusion determine whether the stones produced shall be sapphires, rubies, or Oriental topazes, amethysts, or emeralds.

THE LATE SIDNEY A. DENYES.

On July 3rd one of the well-known residents of the Township of Ernest-town passed away in the person of Sidney A. Denyes. The youngest son of the late Martin Denyes, of U. E.
Loyalist stock, he inherited the homestead about two miles west of Odessa,
where he lived continuously for thirty-five years, making it one of the most substantial properties in the township. In 1889 he married Miss Elizabeth Anderson, daughter of George Anderson, Ameliasburgh, Prince Edward County.

The late Mr. Denyes was a progressive farmer, a keen student of agricultural subjects. Though not taking any prominent part in public life, he was deeply interested in public questions, both political and social. Endowed with a remarkable memory, his discussions of these subjects was very intelligent and informing. In politics
he was a staunch Liberal.

Mr. Denyes' last illness dated from the middle of March this year. In April he was removed to the General Hospital in Kingston, but a malignancy which had seized him could not be arrested, and he returned to his home, where he passed peacefully away. The deceased is survived by his widow and three children: Shelley, at home; Miss Hazel, a graduate nurse of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, who obtained leave to attend
her father; and Mr. Gerald S., now serving with the Queen's University Hospital unit in England; and also
by four brothers and three sisters:
John W., Odessa; James W., Fred-ericksburgh; Harvey J., of Ernest-town; George A., of St. Louis; Mrs.
D. Wright, Violet; Mrs. J. D. Wagar,

can make "four and tuppence" (4s

dian sister, where no appreciable food shortage exists. With the London prices in his possession, a Toronto man recently enquired prices
at several stores in his city, and comparisons show that one might buy in London a unit sample of each of the dozen foodstuffs quoted for $5.80, while in Toronto the total cost would be $5.77. In noting the comparison it should be remembered that the English "quarter" loaf of bread weighs four pounds and the Canadian is three pounds.

Finance Minister Allays Apprehension Caused by Conscription of Wealth Talk

Ottawa, July 10.—A statement that there need be no apprehension on the part of the public that action of a detrimental character with respect to the savings of the public will be taken by the Canadian Government was made by Sir Thomas White in the House of Commons to-day. Coupled with this declaration and the assertion that it was the Government's policy to encourage thrift, was the intimation they must not, however, be understood as "precluding legislation providing for income taxation upon those whose incomes are such as to make it just and equitable that they should contribute a share of the war expenditure of the Dominion."

"It has been officially drawn to the attention of the Government," said
the Finance Minister, "that the use of the expression of 'conscription of wealth' in the debates in Parliament
and by public and other bodies out-

its news reports has caused a certain

in the continued prosecution of the war must largely depend. I desire to say on behalf of the Government that there need exist no apprehension on the part of the public that any action
of a detrimental character will at any

WHITE PLAGUE.

Teachers Have Good Reason for Wearing Masks in Preventing Tuberculosis. Teachers are especially prone to the disease, the statement made by the educational hygiene of New York. This department estimates that the disease is 20 per cent more common among teachers than among the general public of corresponding sex and age. About half of all deaths from tuberculosis are caused by teachers, and this in spite of the fact that they belong to a better class than the general average.

Over-taxing work that leads to exhaustion and nerve strain is given as the main cause. That "four hours of active work" is the statement made by the department about eight hours of office work. What the second cause is lack of rest and regular exercise. When this line, the state says: "The worn, tired teacher marks the teacher. At the close of school, is in addition of serious consequence just a 'tired, run-down' or a case of 'worn-out', but these are predisposing factors of tuberculosis as much as others. The teacher is wise," says the state, "as quickly as possible to get tired feeling and real state of health and to direct herself to an open air exercise as well as to rest."

A wise teacher will do his best and a nervous strain she gets sufficient rest and daily exercise in the worn-out condition that is the beginning of a long life to prevent. To prevent the teacher's first

Canadian Dries Tank.

Walter E. Wheeler, formerly of the Beavers and Y. M. C. A. hockey and lacrosse teams of Brantford, was the first Canadian to run a tank, according to word received by his friends. He received his apprenticeship training in the Waterloo Engine Works plant, hence his selection. He writes home that the work in the tanks is very bumpy, and in case of trouble of a serious kind they have instructions to blow up the machine with themselves, if necessary, to prevent the secrets being discovered by the Germans.

MADE A POOR GUESS.

The Chinese General Knew More Than Did the Tibetan Buddha.

At the entrance of the lamasery at Kumbum are eight large monuments, which contain the ashes of eight Buddhas. Long years ago, at the beginning of the Ming dynasty, after hard fighting the Tibetans were driven back from Chinese territory, which they had overrun for hundreds of miles. When the victorious Chinese general reached Kumbum he sent for these eight Buddhas and said to them: "You can read the future. Can you tell me when you are going to die?" One of them, shrewd enough to understand the general's mind, said, "Tomorrow." "No," said the general; "it will be today." And it was.

Quite a number of temples and buildings make up the lamasery. The chief temple, which is dedicated to Tsong Kaba, the great reformer of Tibetan Buddhism, has a roof of gold, variously conjectured as being from one-eighth of an inch to half an inch thick. Inside is a large image of Tsong Kaba, said by some to be of gold, but it is probably overlaid with gold. The temple threshold is covered with planks, and we saw many poor deluded people prostrating themselves in worship there. Around the main building are many large prayer wheels, which are kept well on the turn by the devotees to obtain merit. — Christian Herald.

On the contrary, it will be the policy of the Government in the future, as in the past, to encourage in every way possible the exercise of the thrift and economy resulting in national savings which have enabled Canada to maintain her credit and improve her economic position during the war. "Any taxation to which it may be necessary for the Government to resort from time to time will be in accordance with legitimate and established forms of taxation sanctioned by the tradition and experience of British self-governing communities. This statement, therefore, must not be understood as precluding legislation providing for income taxation upon those whose incomes are such as to make it just and equitable that they should contribute a share of the war expenditure of the Dominion." — Montreal Gazette.

The First Confederation Day.

Early in the month of June, 1867, writes Sandham, in his "Montreal Past and Present," the attendance of the citizens was called to a public meeting, to be held for the purpose of considering the most appropriate manner in which to celebrate the inauguration of the New Dominion. As usual, committees were appointed, money subscribed, and on Monday, July 1st, the new National holiday was celebrated for the first time, with all the aid which novelty and the finest of weather could give it. The city wore quite a festive aspect, the public buildings and principal streets being finely decorated with flags. The ships in the harbor, including H.M.S. Wolverine, which arrived in May, displayed a large amount of bunting. The sunrise of the day was heralded by the noise of cannon and the morning was occupied with a grand review on Logan's Farm, in which the whole garrison, regulars, and volunteers, took part. In the afternoon a lacrosse match was played on the cricket ground. In the evening there was a display of fireworks on the side of the mountain for which the Corporation had voted $1,000. There was a large influx of visitors from the country, and the celebration was pronounced to have been, on the whole, satisfactory.

Tripled Her Baking Capacity.

"One day, when baking cookies," says a housewife in the Woman's Home Companion, "I expressed a wish for larger pans. My husband said, 'Why not have some made to fit the oven?' He then measured the grate and went down to the hardware store. In a few days I had two Russia iron pans, 19 1/2 by 18 1/2 inches and one inch deep. As these pans hold three dozens of cookies I can do my baking very much more quickly than I could with the old pans, which only held twelve cookies."

ESCAPED FROM GERMANY.

Winnipeg Man Recently Arrived in London.

Sergt. F. G. Hammersley, whose home is in Winnipeg, is one of the trio who arrived in London from a German prison camp, from which he successfully escaped recently. He was in the hands of the Hun for two years, being one of the original prisoners taken in the second Battle of Ypres in April of 1915. Fortunately he was not wounded, but at one prison camp, aptly named Teufelsmohr, the first syllable of which means devil, while he was sick, he was absolutely neglected. He passed through a succession of camps, and the only place where his treatment was fair was near Bremen. Probably this was due to the fact that the shipping interests of this city mean that the people there are better acquainted with the English people.

The food served to Sergt. Hammersley was always poor and insufficient, but the Canadian Red Cross parcels reached the camps and proved to be salvation for the Canadian prisoners.

As the non-commissioned officers always refused to work at drudgery to which the Germans subjected their prisoners, Sergt. Hammersley joined the passive resisters, and as a consequence was made to tramp with other men for hours daily.

On being transferred to a new camp lately started at Herslake, Sergt. Hammersley with a Lancashire corporal and a Manchester man, managed to get away, and reached the Dutch frontier after a four-days' trip, during which they had many narrow escapes from sentries and watchdogs, but once they were over the Dutch boundary they were treated most kindly and were sent to Rotterdam and thence to London.

Hammersley hints that he could say much more, but he is under restraining influences.

War Affects Sunsets.

Observations made at the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory on Mt. Wilson in California during the past few years have shown that our sun, like many of the other stars, is a variable. In other words, the amount of heat and light it sends out sometimes varies by as much as ten per cent. in the course of a few days. To study this variation, its causes and its possible connection with climatic changes on the earth, a branch station of the Astrophysical Observatory is soon to be established in South America.

Since the planets shine by reflected sunlight, it would seem as if changes in the sun's radiation should produce changes in the brightness of the planets. Attempts to measure such changes in the case of Uranus have led to the discovery that this planet varies periodically in brightness. Moreover, the period is 10 hours 50 minutes, agreeing with the time of rotation as determined by an entirely different method. Thus the variation in light is probably due to the difference in reflecting power of different portions of the planet's surface and we have a new method for determining the rotation period.

Canada has sent reports to the Smithsonian Observatory of brilliant sunsets with beautiful after-sunset glows. A similar series was observed in 1883 and was attributed at

STORY OF A REGIMENT

SCOTTISH BORDERERS POSSESS AN ACTIVE BOSWELL.

An American Who Has Done a Great Deal of Work in Canada Since the Outbreak of the War Writes Description of Trip to Halifax.

NO foreign-born private citizen has done more since the war began to recruit the Canadian army than Mr. W. D. Gregory, of Leamington. An American by birth, he threw himself into the work of recruiting since the day war was declared, and nobody in this country or in the United States, we are sure, hailed with deeper satisfaction the decision of Uncle Sam to take his place by the side of the Allies. The latest service Mr. Gregory has rendered is the preparation of a booklet entitled "From Camp to Hammock," in which he describes the trip of the 241st Battalion, C. E. F., Canadian Scottish Borderers, from Leamington, where the battalion was recruited, to Halifax, where it embarked a few weeks ago on board the largest steamship in the world. The account of the journey is given in racy, humorous style, and is one that every member of the battalion and his friends will desire to preserve as a souvenir. Others who read it may well wish that every overseas battalion had its friendly Boswell, too, in order that the "little unremembered" incidents might be similarly preserved, to be referred to in years to come as part of the history of Canada's expeditionary forces.

Mr. Gregory speaks of the kindness of the ladies of Leamington in preparing for the soldiers' departure. There were several "false alarms," and baking rages over the town from morning to night. Several times the welcome supplies were consumed before the real day arrived on April 24th last. All along the route, wherever the train stopped, the men were greeted with enthusiasm, and regaled with whatever refreshments military regulations and their own particular tastes permitted. Pipes and tobacco in several forms were popular gifts, and if we mistake not there is a veiled reference to some peculiar liquid, familiar enough to Kilties, perhaps, which is frequently absorbed with water and ice. As an American Mr. Gregory was particularly pleased at the fact that at Windsor several thousand Americans had come over from Detroit to give a cheer for the Canadian soldiers, and he mentions that in the battalion were many Americans, neither too proud nor too soft to fight.

"Of Quebec," he says, "we shall say little. Too much has already been said and too little done." If there was no particular cheering for the Borderers as they passed through the province, "whose stand in this war shall some day shake Canada from centre to circumference," there was no hostility. Mr. Gregory seems to have expected something else, for he notes that at Riviere du Loup the train was not stoned, and he observes that if the train had been stoned "there would have been some strange faces in hell the next morning, and they would

RAISE MORE POTATO

Prof. Zavitz Makes Suggestion Tobacco Grower

Prof. C. A. Zavitz of the University of Toronto recently made an interesting suggestion in connection with growing. He pointed out that a war measure, efforts are made in the United States the acreage devoted to growing, with a view to the use for food production.

"Tobacco land," he said, "is an excellent potato land. Something like eight thousand acres of land were used in Ontario for production of tobacco. This acreage were used for production of potatoes instead of tobacco, the potatoes produced should be sufficient to feed 200,000 persons with food for a year. If the potatoes were grown in all the Provinces and in the United States would, of course, come a very seldom that a good potato is universal section of the country."

"In 1915 and 1916 the crop was exceptionally high in Ontario, but in each of the years was fairly good in Prince Edward Island, Alberta, and British Columbia. The seed of Ontario potatoes will be used principally in Ontario and it is going to be a disaster to get satisfactory seed for town lots, especially where seed has to be purchased. It requires ten to twelve bags to plant an acre, and seed are now selling at $4 a bag would mean from $40 to $60 for seed."

"Another crop which grows to advantage in the area in which Swede turnip is raised is the turnip. In fact, the Central Ontario, and Prince Edward Island turnip is the best turnip produced in North America. The amount of valuable food produced on an acre for a crop, which usually gives over four hundred bushels. Prices during the last year were a range of forty to sixty bushels, which means $20 to $30 per acre. There is a big demand in the States for Ontario-grown turnips, many of which are shipped to Ontario for human consumption."

Referring briefly to war conditions, Prof. Zavitz said that the seriousness of the situation was somewhat in Ontario that the weather was so sunsets with beautiful after-sun glows. A similar series was observed in 1883 and was attributed at that time to the volcanic eruption of Krakaoa, in the East Indies. As a result of this explosion particles of volcanic dust were hurled to tremendous heights and carried by the air currents to great distances. These particles illuminated by the setting sun produced some very beautiful effects. The present display is attributed to the war, which with its terrific bombardments is producing more smoke and dust than any volcanic eruption. The prevailing currents of the upper air in northern latitudes being from east to west, much of this dust is carried over Canada.

WON VICTORIA CROSS.

Five Canadians Awarded for Conspicuous Bravery.

Five Canadians are included in the list of 30 soldiers awarded the Victoria Cross. Captain Thain W. Macdowell, a B.A. of Victoria College, enlisted at Ottawa in 1915. With the assistance of two others he captured two machine guns, besides two officers and 75 men, and continued to hold the position for five days, although wounded.

Sergt. Ellis W. Sifton, son of an Elgin farmer, near Wainfleet, charged a machine gun and single-handed killed all the crew. He then held off an enemy party advancing down a trench until British troops gained the position. In carrying out this gallant act he was killed after having saved many lives by his conspicuous valor.

Lieut. F. M. Harvey, of Medicine Hat, attached to the Strathcona Horse, ran ahead of his men, jumped into an enemy trench, shot down machine gunners, and captured gun.

Pte. Wm. Johnston (427586), of Moose Jaw, killed crew of machine gun with bombs and captured the gun in first German line; on line reforming he again located another machine gun and stalking the second gun as he had done the first, he succeeded in putting second crew out of action and capturing the gun. He was killed shortly after capturing the second gun.

Major Frederick Lumsden, Marine Artillery, brought into the lines under heavy fire, six enemy field guns.

train had been stoned "there would have been some strange faces in hell the next morning, and they would not have been Highlanders." Whether he means that a Highlander there would not have been recognized as a "strange face" we are unable to determine.

Before concluding his spirited account of the trip with the roster of the regiment and a brief biographical sketch of the officers, Mr. Gregory makes some remarks in more serious vein, which are worth quoting in full. He says:

"Meantime, what of the folks at home? Are we playing the game or are we looking for decorations? We have been a young country, struggling to get on our national feet, and business has so thoroughly saturated our minds for so long, that we cannot yet see past profits. We forget that man has a soul as well as a body. Then, too, we have been living under such a nervous strain that we sometimes fail to regard things from a proper viewpoint, and are inclined to be irritable, and fond of finding fault and of airing imaginary grievances. Then the Government is blamed for everything and a nice spice is given to conversation by talking of 'pull' and 'graft,' and money and influence. Isn't this a slander on our national life and a reflection on everyone who calls himself Canadian? As if the representative men whom we, as citizens, have elected to power and who sent our soldiers across the sea in honor's cause, have so far forgotten themselves that our national virtue, our national conscience and our Canadian honor have been banished from our shores. Is it any wonder that honest men hesitate to assume public responsibilities when this is their reward?"

THE STAY AT HOME VOTE.

Evil Effect of Neglect of Duty by the Indifferent Citizen.

Our most important elections are often decided by the stay at home vote. The course of the government, its policies, our entire administration of public affairs, turn in effect upon the indifference of the citizen. The evils that flow from his neglect of those primary duties may be said to be the beginning of all those evils that seem ever to accompany free government. If the people were as vigilant about choosing their public servants as they are about choosing their corporate officers or their trusted employees it would be virtually impossible for extravagance or graft or the many evils of bossism to exist under our form of government.

We have given much attention of late to what is called a movement for popular government. We have considered the advisability of incorporating into our system of government the initiative, the referendum and the recall. We have at times become violent in expressing a desire for what we choose to call more effective instrumentalities of government. Apparently we have coveted greater obligations and more manifold and complex duties.

Putting aside for a time the question of any benefits to be derived from adopting and using such instrumentalities of government, the questions remain: Would we use them if we had them? Would they not lie like tools by our side, rusting and cumbersome? — Senator Borah in Youth's Companion.

ousness of the situation was noted somewhat in Ontario but that the weather was so different that a smaller acreage of wheat was sown, and went into the winter in a weakened condition. A snow disappeared this small plants of winter wheat mostly alive, but freezing in have in many instances the plants, and in a good killed them entirely. It is probable, therefore, that the winter wheat in Ontario was less in 1917 than in the year.

"I believe," said Prof. Za it would be a decided advantage the interests of food production as well as in the interests of farmers themselves, if the farm increase as much as possible acreage of spring wheat. Experiments at Guelph years have shown that spring has given very good satisfaction.

Thinks Canada Has Done Wonders

WITH the exception of a snarl from the Hearst papers to the effect that Canada ought to have conscription in order to do her share fairly with the United States, all the newspaper comment in the American press concerning Canada has been highly complimentary. Most of the commentators, indeed, seem to think that we have done wonders. One of the la. est American writers to visit this country was Mr. W. O. McGeehan, of The New York Tribune staff. He observes that the only element not flocking to the colors are the French-Canadians, and he is amazed that this should be so. Apart from the slackness in Quebec, however, he has nothing but praise for what Canada has done and is doing. Some extracts from his article are of interest.

"Two months after Great Britain entered the war Canada sent to England its first contingent, a division of 33,000 men. These had been raised by voluntary enlistment, and were fully equipped and partly drilled in six weeks. One of the battalions in this division was the Princess Patricia's Light Infantry. About twenty men of the original battalion are alive to-day. This division also included the 13th and 14th Battalions, from Montreal. These were the regiments that held their ground under the first gas attack at Ypres. To match Canada the United States in July should have on the way to France over 400,000 men. In two and a half years it should raise 5,000,000 men.

"The speed with which Canada responded to the first call is even more remarkable than its numerical showing. Great Britain entered the war on August 4, 1914. Canada at that time had a nominal standing army, which was shipped to Bermuda. On or about October 14 there left from a port in Canada the first division of 33,000 men. By December the 'Princess Pats' went into action. In February of 1915 practically all of the first Canadian contingent were in the trenches and more battalions were on the way overseas. At the outbreak of the war Canada was as utterly unprepared as any part of the British Empire. The railroads were not prepared to carry troops for mobilization and there was no military transports. But in two and a half months an army twice the size of Pershing's punitive expedition—which, by the way, is almost the entire mobile army of the United States—was raised, equipped, trained and transported to the front. The railroads had been organized for the transportation of troops and sufficient shipping to carry the division overseas had been commandeered. Red tape was slashed and the obstructionists were silenced."

Mr. McGeehan thinks that the soul of Canada shines most serenely at the University Guild at Ottawa, where men who have been so injured at the war that they are unable to return to their former occupations are being prepared for other work. Many of these returned soldiers have been gassed, and to look at

Suffragettes Still Work.

Advocates of equal suffrage who have devoted much time to its promotion are turning their activities into other channels, now that the success of that cause appears to be assured. The Ontario Equal Suffrage League may be cited as an illustration. That body has reorganized, under the name Ontario Citizens' League, and has adopted a platform including a number of needed reforms. Temperance promulgators will doubtless pursue a similar course, on the arrival of national prohibition. Workers for civic progress are certain to find plenty to do, if not in one field, then in another.

Big Ore Exhibit.

A feature of the recent International Mining Convention at Nelson, B.C., was an ore exhibit, the biggest and best ever shown in Canada. It consisted of 175 samples obtained from various mines in the United States and Canada.

Singing on Carpet.

Standing upon carpet has a tendency to muffle the voice, since a layer of inelastic and nonconducting material is then interposed between the seat of voice production and the floor, which, when it is not covered, acts as a sound board, taking up the vibrations and giving increased effect and distinctness to them. This can be illustrated by placing a timepiece first upon a rug or carpet and then upon the bare floor. In the latter position the ticking is much louder, because the vibrations of the clock are then much more forcibly communicated to the floor and so to the air of the room and finally to the ear by actual contact between the clock and the floor. A carpet dampens or kills these vibrations because it is a bad conductor of sound. The difference, which is so audible in this case, is in some degree to be detected when the voice is heard under similar conditions.

at the war that they are unable to return to their former occupations are being prepared for other work.
 Many of these returned soldiers have been gassed, and to look at them in the throes of an attack was heart-rending. One man who had been twice wounded told him that he would like to go back again "to have another crack at the Huns," and when one almost hopeless case, a victim of gas, muttered, "I hear those shells again," his companion replied,
 "Oh, buck up!" and that, says the writer, is the spirit of Canada. The work at Ottawa is in charge of Lieut.
 T. B. McCallum, formerly lecturer on philosophy at McGill. He went to the front, but was sent back to take control of the very important work
 which is destined to make over again
 several hundred wrecks from the firing line.

The writer concludes:

"I mention this side to show how thoroughly Canada has gone into the war, for we must go in just as thoroughly. We must send men to the front; we will get back many of them
 'used up.' We must make them over. Canada has blundered with the rest of the Empire, but Canada
 has come through gloriously steadfast with the Empire. We who are divided by an invisible border-line should find inspiration in the achievements of Canada and learn from her mistakes.

"When did Canada first realize what the war meant?" I asked one officer who had been over and who was 'used up.'

"When the casualty lists came in and when the wounded came home," he replied. Perhaps, then, our delays are due to the fact that we will not realize what faces us until we begin to make over the men who have been used up. And if we give with the heroic generosity of Canada, if the courage of the American is equal to the courage of the Canadian, we shall have more than 1,000,000 men used up unless Prussianism is weaker than it seems."

Northlife Is Coming.

An enquiry made at the Foreign Office as to whether Lord North-cliff's mission will take him to Canada elicited the statement that such an extension of his visit had not been formally arranged, "but you can assume," said this informant,
 "that whoever goes to the United States in these times goes to Canada also, and Lord Northcliffe with both personal and business interests
 that have to do with all North America will hardly pass Canada by."

Cobourg Harbor.

In an official report to the United States Department of Commerce, Consul Chester W. Martin, stationed at Toronto, mentions Rochester and Cobourg, Ontario, as the only open winter ports on Lake Ontario, and says that Cobourg has the only fresh water all-the-year-open harbor in all Canada. Reference is made especially to the running of two car ferries
 between Cobourg and Rochester,
 each of which carries thirty loaded
 coal cars and 1,000 passengers conveniently, if necessary. He declares that while the distance from Co-

My hopes were fulfilled. All came in that night tired, hot, dirty and discouraged. Not one of the eight of us had raised a sign of color.

"Well," said Bagsby philosophically, "that's all right. We've just got to go higher. Tomorrow we'll move upstream."

Accordingly next day we turned at right angles to our former route and followed up the bed of the canyon ten or twelve miles toward the distant main ranges.

About 4 o'clock we camped. The flat was green. Little clumps of cedar pushed out across it. The oaks had given place to cottonwoods. We had now to make acquaintance with new birds.

The following morning we went prospecting again. My instructions were for the dry washes in the sides of the hills. Accordingly I scrambled up among the boulders in the nearest V shaped ravine. I had hardly to look at all. Behind a large boulder lay a little cuplike depression of stones in which evidently had stood a recently evaporated pool of water and which in consequence was free from the usual dusty rubble. In the interstices between the stones my eye caught a dull glitter. I fell on my knees, dug about with the point of my bowie knife and so unearthed small nuggets aggregating probably a half ounce in weight.

Although mightily tempted to stay for more, I minded our agreement to report promptly the first discovery and started back to camp. Why I did not come a header in that fearful boulder strewn wash I cannot tell you. Certainly I took no care of my going, but leaped recklessly from rock to rock like a goat. When I reached the flat I ran, whooping like an Indian. From the river I could see Johnny and Buck Barry running, too, and had sense enough to laugh as it occurred to me they must think us attacked by Indians. Far down the stream I could just make out figures I knew to be Yank and McNally. They, too, seemed to be coming to camp, though I could not imagine that my shouts had carried so far.

I burst in on Bagsby, who was smoking his pipe and leisurely washing the breakfast dishes, with a whoop, lifted him bodily by the shoulders, whirled him around in a clumsy dance. He aimed a swipe at me with the wet dishcloth that caught me across the eyes.

"You tarnation young grizzly b'ar!" said he.

turns at a vacation in camp. Every night we "blew" our day's collection of sand, weighed the gold and packed it away. Our accumulations were getting to be very valuable.

For a month we lived this idyllic life quite unmolested and had gradually come to feel that we were so far out of the world that nothing would ever disturb us. The days seemed all alike, clear, sparkling, cloudless. It was my first experience with the California climate, and these things were a perpetual wonder to my New England mind.

Then one day when I was camp keeper at the upper end of our long meadow a number of men emerged from the willows and hesitated uncertainly. They were too far away to be plainly distinguishable, but I believed in taking no chances, so I fired my revolver to attract the attention of my companions. They looked up from their labor, saw the men and promptly came into camp.

The group still hesitated at the edge of the thicket. Then one of them waved something white. We waved in return, whereupon they advanced slowly in our direction.

"Isn't it great?" he said. "Right off the reel! First pop!"

Barry raised his pickax and charged into the bush. We saw a figure rise from the ground, dash away, stumble flat. Before the man could get up again Buck Barry was upon him, and the pickax descended. At the same instant we heard a series of whoops and two shots in rapid succession from the direction of camp. Buck Barry came bounding out of the sage brush and seized his rifle from under the bush where we had kept them.

"Come on!" he panted. "Let's get out of this!"

We ran as hard as we could for a hundred yards, or until we had reached the flat of the river bottom. Then we paused, uncertain as to just what next to do.

"Wait a minute," said I. "I'll just take a look," and hurried up a little spur knoll to the right. From that elevation I instantly caught sight of a crowd of Indians coming up the valley at full speed. Most of them were on horseback, but a number loped along on foot, keeping up with the animals. One look was enough. I raced down to my companions again, and we hastily took refuge in the only cover near enough to conceal us—a little clump of willows in a small damp watercourse. There we crouched, rifles ready.

CHAPTER XVI.

On Trail of the Indians.

I WAS terribly excited. The patter of the horses was now plainly audible, though, owing to the inequalities of the ground, they could not become visible farther than a hundred yards away. I trembled violently and cursed myself for a coward, though I really do not think I was frightened. At any rate, I became deadly cool the moment the first savage appeared, and I drew a steady bead and toppled him off his horse before any one else had got in action. The shot brought them to a stand. They had, I think, expected to find us in our ravine and were surprised. Immediately I dropped the butt of my rifle to the ground and began reloading. A shower of arrows flew toward us, but were deflected by the crisscross of the willows. In fact, this lacework of stout branches seemed to be an excellent sort of armor against arrows. In the meantime my companions had each dropped his man, though Vasquez had better luck than skill, as his savage was only clipped in the leg. I fired once more and elicited a howl. There could be no missing at the distance unless a man quite lost his head, and personally I was too scared for that. Another shower of arrows rattled in the willows; then the band broke to right and left and raced away up the hills like mad. They had no courage and lost stomach for the fight at once when they found us prepared.

We were astonished and delighted, for we had fully expected to be ridden down. As soon as we were quite certain this sudden retreat was not a ruse we came out from our shelter. How many wounded had made off, if any, we could not tell. Three dead bodies lay on the ground. To them we paid no attention, but, with many forebodings, hurried back to camp.

When we appeared in sight Missouri Jones ran out to meet us, his rifle over his arm.

"Where's Johnny?" I cried.

"He was down at the river, getting

We did no more gold was day, but remained close in contact with anxiety for our horses. From time to time we rode, with the idea of war that something was amiss, maiming half dozen horses with the corral.

Night fell, and still the horses did not return. We were greatly distressed, but we could do nothing to do, for we had no idea in what direction they had gone.

"Bagsby and Yank are old speculators Missouri Jones called. "And the fact that Injuns would make them slow and

None of us felt like turning all sat outside on the ground like fire.

Toward midnight we heard a moment later Yank and a strode in out of the darkness.

"Where's McNally?" Yank demanded. "Hasn't he come back?"

We told him we had seen him the missing man.

"Well, he'll drift in pretty s

"You tarnation young grizzly bear!" said he.

I wiped the water from my eyes. Johnny and Buck Barry ran up. Somehow they did not seem to be anticipating an Indian attack after all. Johnny ran up to thump me on the back.

"Isn't it great?" he cried. "Right off the reel! First pop! Bagsby, old sport, you're a wonder!" He started for Bagsby, who promptly rushed for his long rifle.

"I'm going to kill the first lunatic I see," he announced.

Johnny laughed excitedly and turned back to thump me again.

"How did you guess what it was?" I asked.

"Didn't. Just blundered on it."

"What!" I yelled. "Have you struck it too?"

"First shovel," said Johnny. "But you don't mean"—

I thrust my three nuggets under his eyes.

"Say," broke in Buck Barry. "if you fellows know where the whisky is hide it, and hide it quick. If I see it I'll get drunk!"

Yank and McNally at this moment strolled from around the bushes. We all burst out on them.

"See your fool nuggets and 'color' and raise you this," drawled Yank. And he hauled from his pocket the very largest chunk of virgin gold it has ever been my good fortune to behold. It was irregular in shape, pitted and scored, shaped a good deal like an egg and nearly its size. One pound and a tiny fraction that great nugget balanced when we got around to weighing it. And then to crown the glorious day which the gods were brimming for us came Don Gaspar and Vasquez, trailed by that long and saturnine individual, Missouri Jones. The Spaniards were outwardly calm, but their eyes snapped. As soon as they saw us they waved their hats.

"Ah, also you have found the gold!" cried Don Gaspar, sensing immediately the significance of our presence. "We too. It is of good color, there above by the bend." His eye widened as he saw what Yank held. "Madre de Dios!" he murmured.

McNally, who had said and done nothing, suddenly uttered a resounding whoop and stood on his hands. Missouri Jones, taking aim, spat carefully in the center of the fire, missing the dishpan by a calculated and accurate inch.

"The country is just flowing with gold," he pronounced.

Then we blew up. We hugged each other, we pounded each other's backs, we emulated McNally's wild Irish whoops, finally we joined hands and danced around and around the remains of the fire, kicking up our heels absurdly. Bagsby, a leathery grin on his face, stood off one side. He still held his long barreled rifle, which he presented at who ever neared him.

"I tell you, look out!" he kept saying over and over. "I'm shootin' lunatics today, and apparently there's plenty game to choose from."

Although we did not immediately run into the expected thousands, nor did the promise of that first glorious day of discovery quite fulfill itself, nevertheless our new diggings turned out to be very rich. We fell into routine, and the days and weeks slipped by. Bagsby and one companion went out every day to hunt or to fish. We took in return, whereupon they advanced slowly in our direction.

As they neared we saw them to be Indians. Their leader held before him a stick to which had been tied a number of white feathers. As they approached us they began to leap and dance to the accompaniment of a weird rising and falling chant. They certainly did not look very formidable with their heterogeneous mixture of clothing, their round, black, stupid faces and their straight hair. Most of them were armed simply with bows and arrows, but three carried specimens of the long Spanish musket.

The Indians said they wanted to trade.

We replied that we saw nothing they might trade with us.

In return they produced some roots and several small bags of pine nuts.

We then explained that we were reduced in ammunition and had little food.

Don Gaspar here interpolated hastily, saying that in his judgment it would be absolutely necessary that we made some sort of a present to avoid the appearance of intending an affront.

Buck Barry and Jones seemed instantly to accept this necessity.

"Give them two or three of the sad dle blankets," suggested Barry after a moment's thought. "We will have several light hosses going out, and if we have to pad the saddles we can git along with skins or something."

We gave our visitors the blankets therefore. They seemed well pleased, arose and shortly made a primitive sort of a camp a short distance outside our stockade. We did no more washing that day. About 5 o'clock our hunters came in with the best meat of a blacktail deer. Bagsby listened attentively to our account of the interview. Then he took a hind quarter of the newly killed buck and departed for the Indians' camp, where he stayed for an hour.

"I don't think they are out for meanness," he announced when he returned. "They tell me this yere is on a sort of short cut from some of the Truckee lakes down to their villages. But we got to keep a sharp eye on our hosses, and we got to stand guard to-night."

Very early in the morning, when we were just up, several of the elders came over to tell us that some of the young men would stay to work for us, if we so desired. We replied that we had no goods with which to pay for work. Shortly after the whole tribe vanished down river.

A week passed, and we had almost forgotten our chance visitors. One day the two Spaniards, Buck Barry and I were at the cradle. Bagsby, Yank and McNally were the hunters for the day. Johnny and Missouri Jones kept camp.

We had had a most successful morning and were just stacking our tools preparatory to returning to camp for dinner. Buck Barry was standing near some small sage bushes at the upper end of the diggings. He was just in the act of lighting a freshly filled pipe when he stopped as though petrified, the burning match suspended above the bowl of his pipe. Then he turned quickly toward the sage brush, and as he did so a bow twanged, and an arrow sang past his head, so close as actually to draw blood from the lobe of his ear. With a roar of anger Buck

"Where's Johnny?" I cried.

"He was down at the river a-getting water," said Jones, "and I ain't seen him since."

We all ran down to the edge of the river pool whence we drew our supply. For a moment our hearts stood still, for no Johnny was in sight. Then he arose dripping from the middle of the pool.

"This water's cold," he remarked conversationally. "I think I'll come out. Anybody hurt?"

He waded ashore and shook himself like a dog.

"I didn't hear 'em until they were right on top of me, and I couldn't get away without being seen," said he. "so I just waded out and imitated a rock with my head."

We roared with laughter by way of relief.

"It isn't the first time, Johnny," said I.

"That's all right," put in Missouri Jones. "This is no joke. They got three of our hosses."

Then he told us his experience.

"I was just a-browning of the venison," he explained, "when I happened to look up, and that was three of our hosses running off, tails up, and a half dozen Injuns a-hossback driving 'em. I let drive with old Betsy and John-

The rest of the hosses, luckily, was asleep behind the cottonwoods. You bet I didn't call their attention to myself."

He exhibited the greatest satisfaction when he learned that we had accounted for four.

"I'd rather be below their camp than

"but it's the best we can do." He dis-

Spanish, "and when I yell twice quick where to find you. Come on!"

We raised our pieces, but before the command to fire was given one of the sleepers threw aside his blanket, stretched himself and arose. It was a white man!

I confess that for a moment I turned physically sick.

"Hello!" called Bagsby, quite unmoved.

The white man seized his rifle, and
the recumbent forms leaped to life.

"Who are you?" he demanded sharply. "Speak quick!"

"Keep yore ha'r on!" drawled the
trapper, advancing into the light.
"We're perfectly respectable miners,
out looking for a lost man, and we saw yore fire."

The rest of us uttered a yell of joy and relief. One of the men who had been sleeping around the fire was Mc-Nally himself.

We drew together, explaining, congratulating. The strangers, six in number, turned out to be travelers from the eastern side of the ranges. They listened with interest and attention to our account of the Indian attack. Mc-Nally explained that he had been uncertain of his route in the dark, so that when he caught sight of the fire he had made his way to it. We were still engaged in this mutual explanation
when we were struck dumb by a long drawn out yell from the direction of our own horses.

"It is Vasquez," explained Barry.
"He wants to let us know where he is." And he answered the yell.

But at that moment one of our own horses dashed up to the bunch of picketed animals and wheeled, trembling.
Its rope bridle dangled broken from its head. Sam Bagsby darted forward to seize the hanging cord.

"It's cut!" he cried. "Quick! Out across the valley, boys!"

We followed him into the moonlight, grasping our rifles. A moment later a compact band swept toward us at full speed, our horses in the lead, their rope halters dangling, a dozen Indians on horseback following close at their heels and urging them on.

"Shoot, boys!" yelled Bagsby, discharging his own piece.

Our rifles cracked. It was impossi-

"They are all thar," said he, "and

Ten minutes later the cavalcade stop-

They were, as the old man had said,

"And Vasquez?" Yank struck across our exultation.

CHAPTER XVII.

We Send Out Our Treasure.

WE had a good deal of trouble finding the exact spot where we had left him, for we could get no answer to our calls. He was down in a heap, covered with blood and quite dead. The savages had scalped him. In our long companionship we had grown very fond of him, for he was a merry, good natured, willing soul.

"God!" cried Bagsby, deeply moved. "I'll put a ball through the next one of those devils I meet!"

We returned slowly to the fire, carrying the body, which we laid reverently one side and covered with a blanket. In all our hearts burned a fierce, bitter anger. Sullenly we turned to prepare ourselves a meal from the supplies our hosts offered us.

The latter were the father and five sons of a backwoods family from the northwest, Pine by name. They were all tall, heavily built men, slow moving, slow speaking, with clear, steady eyes, a drawing way of talking and the appearance always of keeping a mental reservation as to those with whom they conversed.

Just now they stood tall and grim behind us as we ate, and the gray dawn and the rose dawn grew into day. Nobody said anything until we had finished, then Yank rose to his full height and faced the attentive men.

"I want vengeance," he announced in an even voice, stretching forth his long, lean arm. "Those devils have harried our stock and killed our partner, and I'm not going to set quiet and let them do it." He turned to us.

"Boys," said he, "I know you're with me thar. But I'm going to git our friends yere to go with us. Old man," he said to Pine, "you and yore sons help us with this job and we'll locate you on the purtiest diggings in these hills."

"You bet!" agreed McNally. "You don't need to make my boys no offer," replied Pine slowly. "Those devils were after our hosses too, and

"I want vengeance," he announced in an even voice.

they'd have got them if you hadn't come along. We'd been told by a man we believe that there wan't no Injuns in this country or you wouldn't have seen us sleeping es close to our fire. Whar do you all reckon to come up with them?"

Our old trapper interposed.

"Their rancheree is down the valley somewhars," said Bagsby, "and we'll have to scout for it. We must go back to camp first and get a-ready."

McNally and I murmured against this check to immediate action, but saw the point after a moment. The Pines packed their slender outfit. We bound the body of our poor friend across his horse and mournfully retraced our steps.

We arrived in camp about 10 o'clock, to find Johnny and Don Gaspar anxiously on the alert. When we had imparted our news their faces, too, darkened with anger. Of us all Vasquez had been the only man who never lost his temper, who had always a flash of a smile for the hardest days. Hastily we threw together provisions for several days and arranged our affairs as well as we could. We all wanted to go, and Don Gaspar, in spite of the remains of his malarial fever, fairly insisted on accompanying the expedition.

"Senores," he said, with dignity, "this was my own man from my own people."

Nevertheless somebody had to stay in camp, although at first some of us were inclined to slur over that necessity.

"There's a strong chance that Injuns will drift by and take all our supplies," Bagsby pointed out.

"Chances are slim in only a day or so. You must admit that," argued Johnny. "Let's risk it. We can scratch along if they do take our stuff."

"And the gold?"

That nonplused us for a moment.

"Why not bury it?" I suggested.

Bagsby and Pine snorted.

"Any Injun would find it in a minute," said Pine.

"And they know gold's worth something, too," put in Yank.

"This is a scout, not a house moving expedition," said Bagsby decidedly, "and somebody's got to keep camp."

"I'll stay fer one," offered old man Pine, his eyes twinkling from beneath his fierce brows. "I've fit enough Injuns in my time."

After some further wrangling we came to drawing lots. A number of small white pebbles and one darker were shaken up in a hat. I drew in the fourth turn and got the black!

"Hard luck, son," murmured old man Pine.

The rest were eager to be off. They leaped upon their horses, brandishing their long rifles, and rode off down the meadow. Old man Pine leaned on the muzzle of his gun, his eyes gleaming, uttering commands and admonitions to his five sons.

"You, Old," he warned his youngest,

A PATRON OF ART.

He Was a Good Bluffer, but De Wint Called His Hand.

Peter de Wint, the English landscape painter, was accustomed each year to have a semiprivate show of his pictures before sending them to the Water Color society's exhibition. On such occasions his friends frequently bought pictures, which, of course, appeared at the public exhibition marked "Sold."

Among the painter's friends was a wealthy man who wanted to appear a patron of art and at the same time to keep his money. He managed this by loudly admiring the paintings already sold. He was always a bit too late to buy the pictures that pleased him most and, having seen them, he could never content himself with less beautiful works.

De Wint at last suspected the man's sincerity, and when the next show day came round he concluded to test him. After plenty of time had been allowed for De Wint's friends to make their purchases, the rich man arrived. As usual, his eye soon fell on two "perfect-gems" marked "Sold." Turning to the artist, he said, "Now, De Wint, those are exactly the things I should like to possess; what a pity they are not to be had."

"My dear sir," said the painter, slapping him on the back, "I knew you would like them, so I put the tickets on them to keep them for you."

Sleepy Time Story About a Most Unusual Happening.

FAIRY TALE FROM FAR JAPAN.

How Good Luck Came to a Kind Hearted Farmer—Gift That Came Strangely on the Wings of a Storm—Wonderful Ending of a Birthday Feast.

Well, said Uncle Ben to little Ned and Polly Ann, tonight I am going to tell you about

THE THUNDER CHILD.

It is a fairy tale that Japanese fathers often tell their little ones as they sit out at evenings beside the doors of their straw cottages and see the rice growing in the little fields above which rises the beautiful mountain, which all Japanese love, the stately Fujiyama.

Once upon a time, say the Japanese, there lived in one of their valleys a good couple, who, after spending their lives in hard work, were growing old without having earned enough to keep them when they should no longer be able to toil.

One day the old man was hoeing his field when a thunderstorm gathered. It was only when the rain began to patter down heavily that he stopped his work. Just as he turned to the house there came a terrible crash of thunder and a bolt of lightning seemed to strike the ground directly in front of him. When the cloud of dust had cleared away the old man was amazed to see lying on the ground a dear little rosy cheeked child.

Delighted, he picked it up and ran to the cottage, crying:

"See, wife, what the storm has left us!"

His wife was not less pleased than he was, and the little one grew up in their home tenderly loved and cared for.

He was a wonderfully good boy. He never cared to run about and play with the other children, but followed his adopted father about the fields trying his tiny best to help.

And though they had been so very poor before, now everything seemed to come their way. They were pointed out as the luckiest people in that part of Japan. When their dear boy was eighteen years old they made a birthday feast for him, but although the old couple were now rich enough to feed the whole country if they had wished, the lad asked that the feast be just for themselves.

When it was over, he rose and said: "Dear parents, you have made me very happy, but I am, as you know, not your child, but the child of the thunder, and the time has come when I must go back to my own. May you always be happy as kind hearts deserve to be."

And then where he had stood was a little white mist that floated out of the door and grew and grew until it was a tiny cloud before it reached the top of the mountain, where it melted

Green vegetables are also a valuable means of introducing into the diet mineral matters, particularly iron, in a form in which the body can utilize them. Even at city prices green vegetables have been shown to be an economical source of iron.

Fresh vegetables and fruits must be prepared with care, for there is danger of transmission of disease by means of foods that are served raw. Most people will agree that apples, pears, etc., as picked from the tree in an orchard far enough from the road to escape dust are clean. If they drop to the ground upon clean grass they may still be eaten without much risk, although there would then be more chance for dirt, with its attendant disease producing bacteria.

All fresh fruits and vegetables which come from the market should be thoroughly washed in several waters. Most fruits may be safely dipped in boiling water, and many can be kept there for several seconds without injuring their flavor. This kills many, if not all, of the bacteria and other organisms that are likely to cling to the fruit. A convenient way to do this is to place the fruit in a wire frying basket. Grapes, apples, pears, peaches and plums are not injured by this treatment, and unripe strawberries are often improved by it. Large fruits, such as bananas, apples, oranges and others with unbroken skins, may be safely washed with soap. Dried fruits should be particularly well washed. If they are then put into a warm oven to dry they are likely to absorb the water which clings to them and thus to be softened and improved in taste.

LUNCH BASKETS.

What to Pack In Them and How to Pack Them.

The basket lunch is harder to plan and also to prepare than the lunch at home. To begin with, there are many foods which cannot be included in it either because they are not good cold or because they cannot be conveniently packed or easily carried. This leaves fewer foods to choose from, and so extra care is necessary to prevent sameness. Extra care is needed, too, in the preparation of foods that must be packed in small compass and kept for several hours before being eaten.

Variety in breads, too, is more important at this than at other meals because of the danger of monotony. Wheat bread, whole wheat bread, corn, rye or oatmeal breads; nut, raisin and date breads; beaten biscuit, rolls, crisp baking powder biscuit or soda biscuit and toast, zwieback and crackers may be used in turn to give variety. Rolls hollowed out can be made to hold a large amount of sandwich filling, which is an advantage at times.

In packing the lunch basket put at the bottom the things least likely to crush and wrap the sandwiches, etc., into neat parcels, not all in one. Paper cups, jelly tumblers with covers, which can now be bought in several sizes; bottles with screw tops, such as those in which candy and some other foods are sold, and small jars such as those in which some goods are sold by druggists can all be used for packing jellies, jams and honey as well as the foods mentioned above. When clean and in good condition empty receptacles of this kind can be used for

THIS GIRL LONDON BORN.

All the Stupendously Important Affairs of an Empire Pass Safely Through the Young Lady's Hands—Secretaryship Held by Men Heretofore.

Next to David Lloyd George, prime minister of England, Miss F. L. Stevenson, his private secretary, is perhaps the most important person in the British empire. She performs duties for which men have been knighted amid the plaudits of the nation.

Everything that reaches Lloyd George necessarily passes through Miss Stevenson's hands. The private secretary of the prime minister is his chief confidant, his tactful counselor and, in a sense, even the keeper of his conscience.

Some prime ministers, as for instance Lord Beaconsfield, have caused peerages to be bestowed on their private secretaries. Herbert Asquith not only rewarded his private secretary with a knighthood of the Order of the Bath but with the hand of one of his daughters.

In view of the fact that many distinguished men have occupied the position of alter ego to the British premier, Lloyd George overturned an almost prescriptive precedent when he appointed Miss Stevenson. The nomination created a sensation, being particularly welcome in the ranks of those who are working to broaden the estate of women in the realm.

Not so many years ago a gineering expert calculate Zeppelin could not attain thirty miles an hour, as figures that the ship would under the air pressure. This speed had been actual by a Zeppelin, says R. P. "Zeppelins and Super-Zepp"

Today the tendency is too high a speed to the still air it is doubtful if a Zeppelin can reach, and by the most calculation Mr. Hearne has concluded that the average modern Zeppelin in v about forty miles an hour.

"Of course," he says, "with the wind the ship may be moving at over sixty miles an hour, but the difficulty of gauging the speed of the Zeppelin often causes erroneous estimates of Zeppelin speed by observers. In the upper region where it is moving there may be a current, while near the earth calm."

It is well to note that in a period a Zeppelin can climb an aeroplane. By throwing going full speed ahead, it tail down and shoving the

CHILDREN'S DIET.

How to Give a Youngster the Needed Mineral Salts.

Vegetables and fruit are now considered a necessary part of the diet of the child. The reasons are many, but most of them may be summed up by saying that they furnish material needed to form bone and tissue and to regulate body processes. The mild acids which some of them contain help to prevent constipation; so, too, does the cellulose or fiber, especially when it is raw.

lies, jams and honey as well as the foods mentioned above. When clean and in good condition empty receptacles of this kind can be saved for use in the lunch basket.

Here are some bills of fare for the lunch basket:

1. Sandwiches with sliced tender meat for filling, baked apple, cookies or a few lumps of sugar.
2. Slices of meat loaf or bean loaf, bread and butter sandwiches, stewed fruit, small frosted cake.
3. Crisp rolls hollowed out and filled with chopped meat or fish moistened and seasoned or mixed with salad dressing, orange, apple, a mixture of sliced fruits or berries, cake.
4. Lettuce or celery sandwiches, cup custard, jelly sandwiches.
5. Cottage cheese and chopped green pepper sandwiches or a pot of cream cheese with bread and butter sandwiches, peanut sandwiches, fruit, cake.
6. Hard boiled eggs, crisp baking powder biscuits, celery or radishes, brown sugar or maple sugar sandwiches.
7. Bottle of milk, thin corn bread and butter, dates, apple.
8. Raisin or nut bread with butter, cheese, orange, maple sugar.
9. Baked bean and lettuce sandwiches, apple sauce, sweet chocolate.

Contagious Diseases Among Plants.

All the fungous diseases of plants, such as mildew, scab, blight, rust, rot, etc., are contagious. The contagion is carried from year to year in the diseased part, be it leaf, fruit or branch. The presence of any of this diseased material in the orchard or vineyard increases the chance of the appearance and spread of the disease another year. Nothing is so destructive to the fungous spores as fire, and all affected plants or parts of plants should be cut out and burned.

Sea Serpents.

Sea serpents date back to the days of Aristotle, who wrote: "The serpents of Libya are of enormous size. Navigators along the coast report having seen a great quantity of bones of oxen, which they believe without doubt to have been devoured by the serpents. These serpents pursued them (the seamen) when they left the shore and upset one of their triremes."

Olaus Magnus wrote in the middle ages of a sea serpent 200 feet long and 20 feet thick which haunted rocks and caves near the seacoast, the old writer adding, "And he puts up his head on high like a pillar and catcheth away men, and he devours them."

An Explosion and a Bit of Luck.

A few years ago, at the railway station at Johannesburg, a trainload of blasting gelatine and ninety cases of detonators scooped a hole 400 feet long by 65 feet broad. Pieces of the engine were found a mile away, and beside the fifty more or less complete human bodies discovered twenty sacks were filled with human fragments.

A most extraordinary piece of good fortune attended this terrific explosion. A redhot missile hurtling through the air fell into another dynamite factory nearer the town. Had that factory exploded, the whole town of Johannesburg would have been an utter ruin. But it fell into the only pail of water in the place and instantly quenched itself.

After serving him as a private secretary in connection with his preparation of the national insurance act, she was continued as one of his official secretaries when he became chancellor of the exchequer in 1913. She was retained in the same capacity when he became minister of munitions two years ago. Of five secretaries she was the second in rank. When Lloyd George succeeded to the war office he took Miss Stevenson along in the secretarial capacity.

As the chief private secretary of the prime minister Miss Stevenson receives a salary of $4,000 to $5,000 a year.

She is a graduate of the London university and the Royal Holloway college. Her only brother was killed on the French front in the battle of Guinchy last year.

Spring Tints.

Japanese colors, dashing, splashing reds and yellows, with streaks of celestial blues, are the real tints for spring. Bright colors took a back seat last winter, some say on account of the lack of dyes. Whether the manufacturers can meet the spring decree for a Japanese riot of shades has not been announced. These oriental colors will be particularly noticeable in the spring ribbons. It is to be a ribbon season. Hats will be made entirely of ribbon ruffles, many of them in a new grayish green that is said to be having a wide swing in the Paris millinery salons.

Scotch Hash.

An onion cut fine and cooked a little in beef dripping, then add cooked meat that has been put through a meat chopper and a quarter as much fine crumbs of dried bread. Add salt and pepper and some gravy. If small amount add a little hot water after cooking awhile. Cook slowly half an hour or more, turning carefully to brown it all. This is very rich and is better made of cooked roast beef which is generally the poorest meat for hash. No potatoes in this hash.

Try now and then to do good to others. If we live to and for ourselves only our life must necessarily be a small and poor life since it is limited to our situation and our powers. NEW BLOUSES.

Distinctive Points About
the Late Spring Models.

One of the unusual features of the new blouses is the use of gingham and of dish toweling. To be sure, the latter is of the aristocratic type, made of linen and having crossbars of blue or red threads and mainly associated with the drying of fine china and silver.

Both gingham and linen models are intended to wear with the sports skirt of washable fabrics or of silk or jersey cloth. They are made on tailored lines, but it is permissible to have them trimmed with cross stitching in linen threads or with bands of rather heavy flitel lace.

Another sort of blouse that is out of the ordinary is made without sleeves and is fastened down the back. It is very likely that it will be worn with a guimpe by the normal woman. But for those who like freedom of the arms for tennis or golf and who do not mind sunburn the sleeveless model will prove very acceptable.

Back fastened blouses have come into favor again. They are found not only in the waist length models, but also in the peplum effects, which have gained somewhat on the vogue established for them last fall. Many of them are nothing more or less than Russian blouses, and, while some of them are made with deep collars, there are others that are without the neck finish, excepting for a Chinese band.

A vagary of fashion has brought about a revival of the high neck blouse for spring. Surely it would have seemed more logical to have withheld this type until fall, when the more seasonable period would have tended to popularize the resuscitated model. However, there are women who profess to be a little bit tired of the blouse built with the big collar and the open V neck and who will doubtless patronize the old-new type.

For more dressy wear there are blouses of chantilly lace, principally in white and mounted in white and flesh colored mousseline. A model that has recently arrived from Paris shows the front cut much longer than the back to give an apron suggestion. The blouse is a bit short waisted and is belted in by a wide rose colored ribbon tied in a pump bow, this treatment being repeated at the back where the lace drops below the waist line to form a postillon.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER
OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

THERE are two great obstacles to preventive medicine which is the real medicine, and these are poverty and ignorance. The greatest cause of poverty—that is, real downright need—is sickness. Sickness causes at least one-third of the world's poverty. Several other things, including alcohol, account for the other two-thirds.

Money in the form of higher wages helps in a large measure to obviate poverty and the sickness which oftentimes lies at its door. Perhaps the most noted health man in America at the present time is Colónel (Dr.)

PREVENTION OF DISEASE Gorgas, the man whose energies succeeded in making the Panama Zone inhabitable by white people. Colónel Gorgas asserts that two diseases carried by the mosquito—Malaria and Yellow Fever—drove the white man from the easy living tropics to the inclement north. His enterprise is allowing him to return there. He asserts further (for, like all public health men, his assertions are marked by personal modesty) that the Panama Canal project was made feasible by the fact that the workmen there were paid the highest wages of any place in America. Money may be an evil. It sometimes is; but it has its good uses. The other great foe of public health advancement is ignorance; that is, want of knowledge of what is good for one's health. This column is out against ignorance of this character.

The writer hopes that everyone who sees this paper will read this column. Especially is it desired that the children shall become interested in it, for they, after all, are the portion of the population who are most susceptible to education. The older ones, more set in their ways, will not perhaps take all that is set down here as gospel—although it more nearly approaches gospel than anything else found outside the Good Book—but the children will perhaps gain some good from it. By the way, there is some good public health advice, none better, found in the Old Testament: read Exodus and Leviticus.

Following an outbreak of communicable disease in a home the room occupied by the sick person should be thoroughly cleaned. The floors should be scrubbed with soap and hot water and the walls wiped with a solution of 1 in 2,000 bichloride of mercury, carbolic acid, or cresol 1 in 20. Unless the circumstances seem to the Medical Officer of Health to demand it the room need not be fumigated by means of formaldehyde or sulphur.

It is well known that outbreaks of diphtheria and other diseases, including scarlet fever, cerebro-spinal meningitis and typhoid fever, are influenced by carriers," persons who are quite well and have not recently suffered from the diseases, but who convey disease to others. This is very often the reason of the obscure origin of serious epidemics. Numerous investigators have found diphtheria bacilli in the throat and nose of from one to four per cent. of healthy persons. Among the scarlet fever patients in the Willard Parker Hospital, New York, 4.5 per cent. of diphtheria carriers were found, and in one-half of these the bacteria were virulent, as shown by reaction in guinea pigs. No local treatment is entirely satisfactory in exterminating the germs of the disease. Some of the persistent cases were those with deep pockets in the tonsils, and the complete removal of these tonsils usually give satisfactory results. Carriers of diphtheria bacilli do not themselves contract diphtheria, but they are a common source of trouble to others.

A Tablet to Champlain.

At "The Narrows" bridge, between Lakes Couchiching and Simcoe a tablet was unveiled by Hon. J. L. Decarie on August 17th, 1915, the inscription on which reads as follows: "1615-1915. Samuel de Champlain. The intrepid French explorer who led the first expedition of white men into central Ontario stayed at this strait, now known as 'The Narrows' to fish with his Huron allies, before setting out on the famous expedition against the Iroquois in September, A.D. 1615. Erected August 17, A.D. 1915, the three hundredth anniversary of the arrival of Champlain and his ten companions at Cabiague, the Huron capital, which was in this neighborhood."

Shot Golden Eagles.

Two golden eagles were bagged recently by two sons of W. J. Hawkins at Strome, Alta. One was shot with a rifle and was mutilated so badly that it will not be mounted. The other was caught in a trap and is still alive. A third one has been seen in the neighborhood. The golden eagle is a rare species in the Canadian West.

Shawanoë's Flag.

Through the instrumentality of Mr. Norman Gurd, the flag that was presented at the close of the war of 1812 to Shawanoë, the aide and friend of Tecumseh, was deposited for safe keeping in the Sarnia Public Library early in 1916. For many years this priceless relic was kept by the Indians at the Kettle Point reservation on Lake Huron.

now a young man Can Lay the Foundation of an Old Age Income.

In "The Family's Money" in the American Magazine a father asks his son why he does not increase his income every year in the following manner: "Suppose you save $250 a year, or about $5 a week. You could do that and not suffer. Invest that money in a sound 6 per cent security. During the second year it will earn for you $15, giving you an increase of $1.25 a month. Add your interest gain to the principal, and at the end of the second year you will have $515 working for you.

"At the close of the fourth year you will have a capital invested of $1,092, which during the fifth year will give you $65, or more than $5 a month. Of course each year is adding to your principal and your income. When the eighth year comes to an end you will possess capital of $2,470, which during the ninth year will earn $148, or more than $12 a month, and that is not an amount to laugh at.

"At the end of the twentieth year you have $9,180, which during the following year will earn $550, or more than $45 a month. When that year closes you will possess capital of practically $10,000, which will give you an income increase of $600 per annum, or $50 a month."

Boys and Girls.

The difference is apparent early. A boy has as much fun in stoning a cat as a girl has in hunting for violets. A boy's curiosity is directed to the ice box; a girl would like to see what is in the top bureau drawer.

A girl can give the impression when away from home that her parents are wealthy; a boy cannot.

A girl is never so young that she will reveal to guests at a party that the spoons are borrowed; a boy child never grows so old that he fails to.

Give a boy a dollar, and he will eat it; give his sister one, and she will wear it.

When brothers fight it is over the larger share of pie. When sisters quarrel one has worn something belonging to the other without asking permission.

A Woman Did It.

A lesson to landlords is this. A woman did it. She wanted the house papered. The landlord talked about the paper shortage and took his rent and went.

The next month when he called he found the house beautifully papered. He was pleased and said so. The woman smiled. She walked to the wall and moved a picture aside. Beneath the picture was a grimy square of the old paper. The woman had papered around every picture in the house. As she paid the month's rent she gave notice that she would move the next month.

Gratitudel

An unusual form of testamentary gratitude is recorded in the diary of Henry Greville. "A man who had spent much of his time in fishing left a direction in his will that as he had derived much nourishment as well as pleasure from the fish he had caught at Chertsey it was only fair to the descendants of those fish that he in return should become their food. He therefore desired that his body should be cast into the Thames at Chertsey."

Should Just Balance.

"It has not been so very long, comparatively speaking, since our ancestors were almost exclusively animal in their daily pursuits," says the New York Medical Journal. "Since then the blessing of cooking has proved often a curse, in that it adds temptation to our natural tendency to take more food than we need for sedentary purposes, merely for the sake of the savor thereof.

"It is such a joy to dine, and other sources of pleasure seem so scarce or of such less moment to the average man that to a large extent eating has become one of the reasons for existence. We have made much of the evil of treating to alcoholic drinks, but the temptation held out to intemperance in foods is a more widespread evil, with serious consequences in the long run.

"With a reasonable amount of muscular exercise, perhaps, truer physiological balance is reached then if we are purely sedentary. We approximate more nearly our animal ancestry as to muscular activity, and we can exercise our digestive powers a trifle more without harm. Surely if we do not expect to suffer in one way or another the amount of bodily exercise must balance the intake of food or the intake of food must be made to correspond with the degree of bodily activity."

Some Golf Shot.

A Glasgow golfer vouches for the following: "Playing over the Cathcart castle course one evening last summer with two friends, we were approaching the fourth green, which is of the plateau type. Having played my second, I was preparing to walk toward the green when the air was rent with loud laughter and shouting. On going forward to inquire the cause of the hilarity we learned that my shot had overrun the green, passed between the legs of the player who was at the moment in the act of driving from the fifth tee (the fifth being at right angles to the fourth), knocked his ball from the tee, and his club, descending, had made a perfect shot with my ball to the edge of the fifth green, 175 yards away."—Golfer's Magazine.

Old Time Oratory Unpopular.

The definition of "oratory" is difficult, but in the public mind that form of public speaking called "oratory" is either amusing or offensive. It is suggestive of the mouthing and ranting of some old time tragedian who roared and bellowed on the stage. The public of today will stand for eloquence which bears the mark of sincerity, but the old form of "oration" with gestures of practiced grace, frequent allusion to Greek and Roman history and plentiful quotations from the poets no longer stirs men to great depths or heights.—Exchange.

Keep to the Ridges.

When tramping through a country that has many streams it is usually better to get upon the nearest ridge and follow that than to try to make your way along the course of some stream. The ridge will give you a better outlook and drier walking, while the stream may have to be crossed a number of times and, if its windings are followed, will add miles to your journey.—Outing.

DONATIONS FOR THE BELGIAN RELIEF FUND.

We have much pleasure in announcing that a handsome donation of $8.00
has been sent to Miss Richardson, treasurer of the "U. E. L." Chapter, from those participating at the Pleasant Valley annual picnic for the above object, received through Mrs. Walter Herrington, R.N., R.M.D. No. 6, Napanee, to whom we are very grateful for thinking of the oppressed and starving Belgians, while enjoying themselves in the brightness, beauty and freedom of "God's own Country."

It would seem as though the initiative taken by the members of the Pleasant Valley annual picnic is a good one to follow, and might prove suggestive to other organizations on similar occasions. Should this prove to be the case or otherwise, we wish to thank Mrs. Herrington and her friends very sincerely for their generosity, which is much appreciated.

It will also prove interesting to our members and other readers interested in our work to learn that the Primary Class of Trinity Methodist Church Sunday School, under the able leadership of Mrs. Dickinson, have completed their present fund for the poor little Belgian children, which has reached the remarkable sum of $25.00. We can assure these thoughtful and generous little people that this amount will bring joy and a longed-for meal to many a wretched and half-starved
Belgian child, and we thank Mrs.
Dickinson very warmly for her energy and clever planing which has resulted
so satisfactorily for these poor little ones.

We know that Mrs. Arthur Pepler,
Convener of the Belgian Relief Committee in Toronto, to whom the above amounts have been forwarded, will be delighted by the sympathy thus evinced in this most practical manner.

Our work room will continue open all summer, as this is no time to slacken our efforts in patriotic work,
and those requiring a rest and change must take it in turn, so as not to effect the out-put of our work room.
Therefore do not forget the days,
Thursdays and Saturdays, and bring your friends to help in the good work.
